Tom Breiwick murdered

New Orleans police heavily protect the tourist district from New Orleans' many predators. On the night of 2 December 2003, a tourist, Tom Breiwick, 56, was in town for a convention of commercial fishermen and boat builders. Tom came from Ballard, near Seattle, Washington, and was a marine workboat outfitter.

After dinner, Tom and two buddies stopped for a drink. About a block from Tom's hotel, the three spilt up and headed to their hotels. While Tom was walking that single, well-lit block, a predator sneaked up behind him, bludgeoned him on the head, and robbed him. Minutes later, three pedestrians found Tom lying half in the street with his pockets turned inside out. He was dead from a massive head wound. They called the police. It was a few minutes before 11:00 p.m.

Tom Breiwick was well known to many of the 11,000 attending the International WorkBoat Show. The next day, news of his murder rippled from booth to booth across the giant convention center floor. There was talk of not attending next year's show or of moving the show to another city.

New Orleans police are used to violent crime. They don't get excited about murders. However, December's International WorkBoat Show's 11,000 fishermen and boat builders are a major source of revenue. Worse, Tom Breiwick was killed in a "very safe" part of town at what is considered to be a safe time of day.

Police put as many of their best men on the case as they could spare. Predators who had previously attacked tourists were high on their list of suspects. Three days after the killing, police arrested Lester Harris.

Tom Breiwick's life was worth only the money he had in his pockets. Within a couple of hours, the predator probably spent it all on crack cocaine. N

Tom Breiwick came from sturdy and industrious Norwegian and German stock. As long as men have gone down to the sea, his ancestors have done so in an unbroken chain. His grandfather Kolstrand came to America from Norway and fished off Alaska in an open rowboat. In 1929, he founded Ballard Washington's famous Kolstrand Marine. For 74 years, this family business has made deck equipment, like heavy and complex pot pulleys, winches, and many items whose names are meaningless to landlubbers.

As a boy, Tom worked there and was as at home with the calloused-handed fishermen as he was with the machinist. He earned a mechanical engineering degree and started his own boat outfitting firm, Pacific Marine Equipment.

Today, most large commercial fisherman in nearly every country have heard of Kolstrand and Tom Breiwick. Tom has sold his outfitting services in most every major fishing port from Thailand to Chile to Alaska. Many of those places are rough and dangerous. But Tom was a big strong man who took the risk.

Tom's pet project was spearheading construction of Seattle's Fisherman's Memorial. It is a tribute to all area fishermen who did not come back from the sea. It features a statue of a mariner battling a halibut at the end of a taut fishing line. Next to it, etched in granite, are names and dates of fishermen who died at sea. N

New Orleans Police are holding Lester Harris, 32, on one count of first-degree murder in the killing of Tom Breiwick. Three days after the Breiwick killing, Police captured him in a pool hall five blocks from the murder scene. Police claim that Harris had something in his possession that will link him to the killing.

Lester Harris is "homeless" and unemployed. In other words, he's a useless bum and a burden to society. He says he returned to New Orleans from Jacksonville, Florida, because his daughter has cancer.

Harris has a police record for cocaine possession, assisting a prisoner to escape, and carrying a concealed weapon. He was imprisoned only once, and that was for a probation violation. In March 2002, police arrested Mr. Harris for assault on a tourist. The victim would not return to New Orleans to testify, so the charges were dropped. N

Linda still expects him home

Don't ask Linda Breiwick about her husband Tom unless you have a mug of coffee, because she has known him since the third grade.

Linda remembers Tom as a family man. After he was murdered but before she had totally accepted his passing, she said, "He is the most caring man you would ever want to know. He's kind, he's trustworthy, and he would do anything to help anybody."

Like the wives of Tom's mariner ancestors, she keeps a light in the window to guide his way to shore. She said, "I waited for him all last night. I slept on his side of the bed, and I'm waiting for that door to open." N

They are violent and you cannot lock them all up. What is your solution?

Liberty? General Franks predicts dictatorship

In December 2003, General Tommy Franks predicted what most of you have known for years. He said that if a weapon of mass destruction [WMD] was used against the U.S. or its allies, and if that WMD was blamed on terrorists, the American people would abandon the Constitution in favor of a military dictatorship.

We saw that after the Oklahoma City bombing. Senator Don Nichols, a supposed ultra-conservative, led the charge to regulate everything from fertilizer to free speech.

After the September 11 World Trade Center [WTC] bombing, the Patriot Act and other anti-Liberty legislation were rammed through. And in both cases, the American sheep who call themselves "conservatives" gave the OK.

Franks said the dictatorship would come even if an ally was attacked. Who does he mean? "Ally" would certainly include Canada, Europe, Israel, and Japan.

Now it won't be that simple. The U.S. will always appear to be a democracy. And the dictatorship won't happen overnight. It has already been gradually happening for years. Only a fool or a conspiracy theorist nut would think some general is suddenly going to announce a dictatorship. The death of everything we cherish will happen slowly. To stop it will require you to say, "I've had enough." ✓

Liberty or police state? Armed police raid Goose Creek school

Grainy security video shows about 50 students sitting or lying near the walls while police conduct a drug sweep. Blacks claim their children were traumatized and terrorized. Had this happened when your editor went to high school (back in the 1960s), we would have thought it was the "neatest" thing since the Halloween when some boys put an outhouse on top of the school. But that was one of those nasty all-White schools like a page out of My Three Sons or Ozzie and Harriet.

Drug dealing by students at Stratford High School in Goose Creek, South Carolina, was an increasing problem. This is a small city of 25,000. It is 78% White, 15% Black, and the rest are mostly Mexicans and Asians.

Drug charges at Stratford had more than doubled since last year. In the first four months of school, they had 19 charges. To stop the drug dealing and head off the murders and shootings that invariably follow the drug trade, Goose Creek police decide to raid the school. They targeted the specific hallway where drug transactions had been recorded on the school's 70 security cameras.

The 5 November 2003 drug sweep was caught on these security cameras. Police found no drugs or guns. Apparently, either the suspects were tipped off, absent from the search, or they kept their drugs off campus.

The police swept the school first thing in the morning, when only two bus loads of mostly Blacks had arrived.

Hall security cameras show police entering. Some had hand guns drawn. The few students that were there, were ordered to sit against the hall walls. Suspects were ordered to sit up on their knees. A few students refused to comply and were pushed down by police. Police and dogs searched the school. No one was strip searched or anything of the kind. In 30 minutes, it was all over—except the shouting.

Needless to say, the cops were mostly White and the suspects were "mostly Black students." And, needless to say, the local reverends held meetings, claimed the "children" were terrorized, and called Jesse Jackson. Jackson screamed racism, said the students were humiliated and that this "is a test of the new South." Of course, the FBI and Justice Department have been called in to investigate.

If we're going to have integrated schools, we must choose between Liberty and police control. One choice is to have metal detectors and security cameras, cops constantly in the schools, and occasional drug sweeps. The other is to let the schools deteriorate into chaos, drugs, murder, and rape. In either case, you will listen to an increasing and constant bitching from Blacks and their allies. If there are drugs and violence in the schools, Blacks will whine. If there is policing of the schools, Blacks will complain.

The logical choice is to have all White schools in an all White country, but that would require revolution. ✓

This month we mention some ways diversity will cause us to lose our Liberty. If you can think of other ways or examples let me know. This is an important topic. —Editor

Loss of Liberty is inevitable in a mixed-race America, but a mixed-race America is not inevitable.

Decide between Liberty & diversity or others will decide

Liberty? Cops will wait only 15 seconds before smashing in your door. They invade in full body armor, wearing ski masks over their faces.

We're all against unlawful "search and seizure" as stated in the Fourth Amendment. But what if the police are after a low-life crack cocaine dealer who will wash the evidence down the drain?

LaShawn Lowell Banks, street name Shakes, of North Las Vegas, Nevada, was just such a man. At 2 p.m. on 15 July 1998, police with masks and body armor surrounded his home. They knocked on the door, waited 15 to 20 seconds, and smashed down the door. Inside, they found a body armor vest, three guns, $6,000 in cash, a set of scales, and 11 ounces of crack cocaine.

Banks pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 11 years. He appealed the conviction on the basis that 15 to 20 seconds was too short a time to fit the Constitutional meaning of a lawful "search and seizure." Therefore, all the evidence that was seized was inadmissible. The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed with Banks, overturned his conviction, and he was freed with a clean record after having served four years.

In December 2003, the U.S. Supreme Court unanimously said that the Circuit Court of Appeals was wrong. Banks therefore still owes seven years. Instead of being rounded up and sent to prison, Banks is still free pending a hearing to decide whether to recommit him. And the police are free to smash down your door before you have time even to get out of your easy chair.

Do you want liberty or do you want the safety of knowing that the police have a tool to lock up drug dealers? You cannot have both in a mixed-race America.

Of course, when the police or FBI come to smash down your door, they probably won't have crack cocaine on the warrant. But they may have something else you could wash down the drain, like gun powder. Or something else you could destroy such as a computer hard drive.

LaShawn Banks. A multi-racial democracy will not work because the police must treat you the way they treat Mr. Banks. The police must treat him like an animal, smash in his door, and storm into his house. The era of treating suspects like gentlemen is over. No longer will the police knock on your door, wait for you to arrive, and say, "Mr. Jones, we have a warrant for you."

Old English Common Law

The English freemen objected to the English King and his hereditary nobles' methods of search and seizure. The noble's soldiers would simply smash their way into a home. The soldiers, dressed in body armor and brandishing swords, would seize a suspect and evidence and leave. Being civilized men, they soon came to an understanding that the soldiers must knock and announce their business. They could only smash in the door if access was denied. America is no longer a country of civilized men. The concept of gentlemanliness largely disappeared decades ago.

Is it cops? Or is it home invaders?

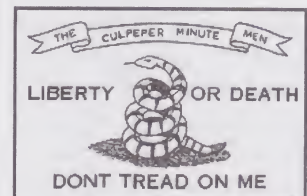

Very often, home invaders claim to be cops as they barge in. This confuses the homeowner, who must reflect for a second, "Are these really cops?" It gives the invaders a few seconds to force compliance and get the drop on the victim. Often they also wear clothing that would make them appear to be police.

If at this instant, some one yelled, "Police open up!" what would you do? If you run for the door, and it's the cops, you have probably made the right decision. At least, you will not have to hire a contractor to install a new door, frame, and probably part of the adjoining wall.

But if it's home invaders, you should be thinking about securing that door and other doors, warning family, getting a gun, calling 911, and/or escaping out another door or window. Guess wrong, and you will be brutalized, raped, or murdered. You have only a split second to decide. And you have nothing to go on except a voice.

In fact, one of the main reasons for the historic "knock and announce" was to protect the homeowner and the police from being killed by each other. However, today's cops rely on body armor, surprise, and brutality to subdue anyone, suspect or innocent bystander. Welcome to the 21st century. ✎

Major gun-running operation exposed at Wilberforce University

Cleophas Bell, 24, readily admits that he and other Wilberforce University students were buying guns, which were eventually transferred to the "Double ii Bloods" street gang in New Jersey. The Department of Justice (DOJ) says the students bought and illegally transferred 76 guns, of which 20 have been recovered.

The plot was apparently cooked up by Jairren Aguilar and Seon Paton, former Wilberforce students. Patton, 22, who lives in a classy middle-class neighborhood in Newark, had the original idea and the New Jersey contacts. Aguilar, 22, is from Riverside, California.

Details of which current student bought what guns have been not been released. In addition to Cleophas Bell, the other students charged in the case are Kenyatta Hillman, 29; Emma Craver, 22; Joshua Furman, 24; Thomas Johnson, 23; Rahandra Riley, 23; Desmond Searcy, 25; and Jewell Washington, 23. Four have pleaded guilty.

The Wilberforce students bought the guns from James Dillard at the Hole In The Wall gun shop in nearby Xenia, Ohio. On 17 April 2003, one student bought 25 handguns. Five days later, one student bought 15 guns, and another bought 16.

The DOJ says the guns ended up in the hands of Quadree "Trouble" Smith, notorious leader of the Double ii Bloods. He is known as the "Five Star General." Also receiving guns were Michael "Fat Mike" Harris, 22, and Danny Alvarez, 24.

Within three days of its purchase in Ohio, one of the semi-automatic handguns was confiscated after it was found in the possession of a "Double ii Blood" gang affiliate in New Jersey. The Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms quickly traced the gun's serial number from manufacturer to distributor to the Hole In The Wall gun shop. ATF agents visited the shop and checked the Federal firearms transfer forms and quickly spotted the large sales.

DOJ and Dillard both agree that he didn't know the guns were going to the Double ii Bloods. However, DOJ says he should have known that college kids don't buy dozens of handguns unless they are reselling to an illicit activity. Even if Dillard beats the gun-running conspiracy charges, he is charged with numerous, serious paperwork violations.

DOJ will use these crimes for a major Soviet-style showcase trial. Gun dealer Dillard will be made to sit at the same defense table as Quadree Smith and the other ghetto denizens. The idea is to intimidate as many gun dealers and gun owners as possible.

Attorney General John Ashcroft is using this incident to justify what he calls "tough investigative, prosecutorial, and prevention tools." These may be needed to control the Wilberforce gang, the Double ii Blood gang and the rest of that folk, but to us they are just another imposition on our Liberty. ✎

John Wayne in the 1949 western She Wore a Yellow Ribbon. Wayne calmly chews tobacco while hostile Indians torture to death a White gun runner who has just sold them rifles they will use against Wayne's troopers. In those days, Whites had liberty because they quarantined Indians and Blacks, and eliminated bad Whites.

The Reverend Dr. Floyd H. Flake is the president of Wilberforce University, the oldest private African-American university. On October 16, 2003, he issued a memo saying the Federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms had interviewed several of his students. He mentioned that the New York Daily News had charged that gun-running gangs were headquartered at several predominantly Black colleges. Those students were buying large numbers of handguns and funneling them through intermediaries to ghetto gangs. He said, "The evidence indicates that a number of our students, particularly those who would not ordinarily be suspect, have been used as 'mules' in the purchase and delivery of weapons."

Wilberforce is located in Xenia, Ohio, about 15 miles east of Dayton. It describes itself: "Wilberforce University is a unique institution located in a state rich in America's private college tradition. Founded prior to the end of slavery in 1856, it is the nation's oldest, private African-American university. For 147 years WU has, through sheer force of will, provided young African-American students with a solid educational experience." ✎

Who causes the gun crime that "justifies" gun control? Those people need to be controlled.

Editorial: Wayne LaPierre turns his back on Second Amendment Liberty

In supporting the latest gun control law, the NRA's Wayne LaPierre joined Ted Kennedy, Charles Schumer, and Diane Feinstein. George Bush eagerly signed it into being. It outlaws "plastic handguns" none of which have ever been made or sold. LaPierre said, "We (the NRA) have no interest in an undetectable firearm. So we support the law to address the problem that never existed."

Also joining the enemy camp was the National Shooting Sports Foundation. NSSF spokesman Gary Mehalik said, "I think that post 9-11, when it comes to firearms, people are much more realistic about their ownership and legitimate uses for defense." Both of these men think that owning firearms has to do with hunting or personal defense. In other words, little Wayne and boy Gary are so scared that they will compromise away your rights.

Perhaps the LaPierre-Mehalik crowd realizes Thunderbolt's position on gun control: A multi-racial America and gun ownership are incompatible. Whether they consciously realize it or not, they have chosen racial diversity over the Second Amendment Liberty.

George Washington and many of the other wealthier men of his time owned cannons. The Patriots were revolutionaries. They used their stockpiles of cannons, rifles, and muskets for the violent overthrow of the legitimate government. They killed, wounded, and maimed the King's men. When the Second Amendment was drafted and ratified, everyone knew it was about violent revolution. The Patriots had every intention of overthrowing their new government if it got out of hand. They weren't in the least concerned about dove hunting or shooting some burglar. The ownership of weapons was unlimited.

However, there were men in those days who believed in gun control. Benedict Arnold was one of them. He would have been quick to outlaw plastic guns.

For decades, the gun lobby has argued that the original intent of the Constitution's Second Amendment protects gun rights. Now they have thrown it away.

Who might use the "plastic guns" for unlawful purposes? Terrorists, those non-White killers who should never have been in the U.S. to start with, are the ones. But little Wayne and boy Gary won't say anything about the terrorists' race. Nor will they say anything about the races which produce gang members and other violent criminals. Instead, they are spending millions to teach Blacks and Mexicans how to shoot handguns to "defend themselves." Following the NRA's advice, minorities are buying large caliber handguns and even laser sights, and they are practicing.

Are Mehalik and LaPierre much different than the White gun runners who armed the Indians? ✓

Welcome to Massachusetts

Hunting in Massachusetts, where our revolution started, is considered carrying a gun. To carry a shotgun or rifle, a hunter needs a firearms identification card (FID). To get or renew an FID, you take your application and $100 to the local police or sheriff's office. They check to see if you have a criminal record. Then local cops send it to the state police, who check to see if the fingerprints on your application are really your fingerprints. Then it goes to the license bureaucracy.

Often, the local cops don't have time to fool with the application, and it gets delayed. The state police are in the same fix, and the license issuing people are often behind 30 to 90 days. As a result, many hunters this year could not legally hunt because their FID cards were not renewed in time. Some risked the $5,000 fine and loss of future gun rights. Some of these guys hadn't missed a deer season for over 50 years.

Why do they need FID cards anyway? The cards are intended to find excuses to crack down on potential criminals who carry guns. And you must obey the same restrictions as the Puerto Rican who just flew in yesterday. That's equality. Everything is reduced to the level of control required by the worst criminal element. Equal men cannot be free. ✓

Supreme Court decides against you

On 1 December 2003, the Supreme Court refused to hear a challenge to California's "assault weapons" ban. This confirms that states have the right to outlaw a class of weapon. Gun haters say it proves that the Supreme Court considers gun ownership a militia right, not a personal right. It's time that gun owners realize that they cannot go crying to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is the enemy. ✓

Gun control is inevitable in a mixed-race America, but a mixed-race America is not inevitable.

A lesson for us all: Tara's & Dennis' mixed and fatal marriage

Tara Barrett-Greene was born to be a teacher. Her fellow teachers say they never saw a better math teacher. One said, "She loved her kids. She absolutely loved her kids. She had a really loud voice, so she taught really loudly, and I would leave my door open so I could hear her. How much she loved her kids. She had the heart of a child. She was just always really fun."

Tara even thought she could teach Dennis Greene how to be a good and decent man. After eight years of marriage, the optimistic Tara gave up and planned a separation. Then, he killed her. All teachers eventually learn that "you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." Even Tara couldn't make a White man out of a Black.

Tara Barrett had a lot going for her. She was attractive, intelligent, and hard working. She made one big mistake. She married Dennis Greene. Tara's mother said Tara thought she could change Dennis. She tried for eight years. They had a son, Chi'an, now seven. Tara, 28, was an eight- and ninth-grade math teacher in a Covington, Kentucky, public junior high. Dennis, 31, had a job in a troubled-youth facility. The Greenes lived in Lake Side Park, Kentucky, just south of Cincinnati, Ohio. Friends say Tara was planning on a separation. In fact, they say she was becoming quite happy and was optimistic about her future without Dennis.

On about 3 May 2003, Tara told Dennis, in no uncertain terms, to get rid of his collection of soft-core pornographic magazines. She didn't want them in her house, especially with a seven-year-old son. It developed into a major dispute. Most men might have resisted such a request but would have thrown them away or hid them in the trunk of the car, etc. But the hulking Dennis wasn't going to be pushed around.

Dennis went to work Sunday at the children's facility. At 2:00 p.m. he called a friend, Matt Kirts, and told him that he was going to kill Tara. "I'm going to kill her," Dennis said. At 4:00 he told his supervisor he had a "family emergency," and left. He did not plan to come back. He arrived home at 6:00 and started a fight with Tara. He claims the fight started because he found his son playing unsupervised outside.

Only Dennis knows what happened after that. He said he smoked a marijuana cigarette. Tara grabbed it out of his mouth and put it in her own. He slapped it out of her mouth. She punched him in the stomach, he claims. The 248-pound man choked her from behind for two to three minutes, but she still gasped for air. Unable to kill her, he grabbed a turkey knife and ripped it across her throat. Dennis Greene almost completely decapitated his wife, and she quickly bled to death. Dennis looked at the clock; it was 7:08 p.m.

Her seven-year-old son apparently saw his mother dead in a huge pool of blood. He is now terrified of his father.

Dennis left and contacted two local friends. He told both that I "did it OJ-style, without the Bronco." OJ being O. J. Simpson, who was accused of killing his wife in much the same manner, using a large knife. He borrowed $200 and headed for Chicago, where he was raised. He arrived at 2:00 a.m. and took refuge with friends.

He sat on a couch and smoked pot. He made five videotapes of himself rap dancing and singing about the murder. He appears to show no remorse and brags about the killing. Here is part of his song:

*I was waiting on Tara. The mother-f——g bitch made me mad.
I had to end her life. Now I'm sad.
I really don't care about tomorrow.
The bitch made me mad.
She kept at it and I had to take her f——g life.
It's just Dennis Greene and I ain't got a mother-f——g wife.
I really don't care about tomorrow.
Hell, you try to dare me,
The f——g bitch made me mad.
I put it on paper, hell yeah, I'm still sad.
She kept at me so I had to take her f——g life.
I cut her mother f——g neck with a sword.
I ain't going to jail and I told you,
I'm going to be on the run.
I got my gun.*

At 11:30 a.m. police, acting after Tara's mother called, found Tara's body.

Acting on a series of tips, Chicago police began a surveillance of Greene on 7 May 2003. On 8 May, police accompanied by U.S. Marshals moved in to serve a warrant for Tara's murder. At about 4:00 p.m., Greene took a 28-year-old woman hostage. He knew her, and they had "some kind of relationship." Greene told the police he had a gun and that he wasn't going to let the woman go anywhere. Police surrounded the apartment building, called in heavy reinforcements, and blocked off several streets. After two hours of the hostage siege, Greene let her go. At 9:55 p.m. Greene surrendered and was eventually extradited to Kentucky. It is not apparent that Greene will ever be tried for this Chicago kidnapping and all the related crimes.

Greene was tried in November 2003. He claimed "extreme emotional disturbance," including Tara taunting him with alleged boyfriends. But the jury didn't believe him. On 15 December, a judge sentenced him to life in prison, but he will be eligible for parole in 20 years. His lawyers plan to appeal. No sentence means anything in today's America. ♣

Predators attack those who can't fight back

Dennis Greene

Top: Dennis Greene in court. Left: close up. Right: in home video after he killed his wife, he is rapping about the murder.

Dennis R. Greene, Sr. lived on Chicago's south side until 1995. In 1993, he was arrested for aggravated robbery and assault. He had yanked a gold chain from around a Cincinnati woman's neck. He ended up pleading guilty to a reduced misdemeanor count of disorderly conduct.

In 1995, he attacked Bahja Hocker, the mother of one of his children. He was sentenced to 180 days in jail and fined $500. There is no indication that he ever went to jail.

How Dennis got past the security check at the troubled youth facility, where he worked, isn't apparent. Maybe being big and mean is what they need to keep the youths, 9 to 17, in line.

Editorial: Whose fault is it?

There are a lot of candidates for blame for the disastrous life of Tara Greene.

Certainly, Dennis Greene must be held directly responsible for her murder, in the same way a pit pull must be held responsible for the murder of a child.

Tara Greene married the bum; she made the decision. Many of you may have just called her a name and went on to another article. However, she was only 21 when she married the monster. To those who are young, 21 seems a responsible age. But older people know that judgment improves greatly, at least to 40 years, if not to 50. We all make bad mistakes when we are young.

Tara's parents were apparently unable to teach her how to pick a decent husband. They neglected to teach her not to even consider a Black. Her parents were older, so maybe they are to blame.

Tara's neighbors, teachers, and college professors not only did not teach her the right path, but also led her astray.

Society, as a whole, did Tara no favor.

So, who do you blame?

I blame myself, Bob DeMarais. I take her disgusting decline into race-mixing and her death personally. I am responsible because I was her kinsman. It is the duty of kinsmen to protect the young. It is the obligation of kinsmen to eject aliens and to make sure our young have no contact with them.

I could blame intermediate causes — the Jewish-dominated media and America's low-life politicians. But they are there because I failed to act successfully to destroy them.

In the end, I have direct control over only my actions, and I can blame only myself.

Lastly, I am to blame because no one else seems to accept responsibility. Thunderbolt's purpose is to alert others and get them gradually to accept more responsibility. Responsibility is painful. One has to develop courage to do his duty, and that takes time. ✓

Engineer & helper murdered

Steve Luburich, 50, an engineer from Chicago, had come to Dallas to install an assembly line system in the A-1 Paper Tubes & Sales factory near Love Field airport. On Wednesday, 26 November 2003, the plant shut down for the Thanksgiving holiday, and Luburich needed to be done by Monday morning. He hired a Dallas man, Willis Graham, 45, to help him. Wednesday night, they were working alone in the factory.

Dallas police believe the two heard some voices and went to see who it was. They surprised a pack of burglars who were there to steal power tools. The predators beat Luburich and Graham to death. Their battered bodies were found Monday morning by a factory manager.

Tuesday at 1:20 a.m., police spotted the unoccupied automobile of one of the murdered men. They watched it until two men got in it and tried to drive away. Police stopped them. Police held one man, Tyrone Crear, 22, for the capital murder of the two workers. Police have not yet found the other suspects. ✓

On Monday, 23 December 2003, sheriff's deputies arrested Cedric Coldran, 32, for murder, kidnapping, and armed robbery. They allege that two days earlier, Christopher Carroll, 19, and his girlfriend made the mistake of parking near Coldran's rural Graniteville, Georgia, home. Armed with a shotgun, Coldran bound their hands, kidnapped them to another location, robbed them, and killed Carroll with a shotgun blast to the chest. Coldran fled in Carroll's new 2004 Chevy Z-71 pickup, leaving the girl unharmed. ✓

64-year-old newspaper delivery man killed

Leonard Feigel, 64, and Dolores Feigel, 62, had a Pittsburgh Post-Gazette newspaper delivery route in Pittsburgh. They worked together, with Dolores driving and Leonard tossing the papers. It was an early morning job. On 27 September 2002, they were in the middle of their route at 5:00 a.m., when they spotted a man walking down the street toward their car. In an instant, the man turned hateful and violent. He pulled a .357 revolver and jerked Leonard out of the car. Leonard tried to push the barrel away while Dolores tried unsuccessfully to call 911 on her cell phone. Within 15 seconds, Dolores heard a shot and saw Leonard fall.

She tried to defend Leonard by hitting the attacker with her car. Because her husband lay bleeding in the street, she was only able to bump the predator without risking running over Leonard. In response, the gunman fired two shots at her. One hit the driver's side door and the other the side of the car behind her. The gunman fled. The slug had hit Leonard in an artery in the thigh. He lost a large amount of blood and his heart couldn't take the strain. Leonard Feigel died 18 hours later in the hospital. Police didn't have a clue as to the predator's motive.

At 11 p.m. on 24 November 2002, two policemen spotted a suspicious character, skulking behind a Bed Bath & Beyond store. They stopped to talk to him. He tried to get away and they had to subdue him. They found a .357 revolver and a small amount of marijuana in his car. The gun had been stolen in a February 2002 burglary, and the police sent it to a lab for routine tests. Police did not suspect him in the Leonard Feigel killing.

The man was Jamar Travillion, 23, a convicted felon. He was arrested on gun and drug charges but quickly posted bond. During the next five months, he was three times arrested for new gun and drug charges. Each time, he quickly posted bond.

On 14 May 2003, the laboratory

In December 1999, Jamar Travillion (pictured left) was convicted of a robbery in Allegheny County, Pennsylvania. He served two years of a 3½ year sentence. He was released in October 2001. Since then he has been arrested and released on bond four different times for gun and drug charges. Pittsburgh police say he killed Leonard Feigel, 64 (pictured right). Leonard Feigel and his wife were delivering newspapers at 5:00 a.m. when Leonard was killed.

returned the results that matched the .357 revolver with the slug that killed Feigel. Dolores Feigel was shown a photograph lineup with photos of eight different men. She immediately picked Travillion, and then she broke down. On 16 May 2003, Travillion was arrested for Leonard's murder and related charges. Police also suspect him of armed robbery of a store and a pizza restaurant.

That's the way it is in America today. Two Whites in their sixties get up early in the morning to do the routine, thankless job of getting us our newspapers. One of them is murdered without rhyme or reason by a mad dog predator.

There are millions of predators. We can't keep them all in prison; we can't keep them all in jail awaiting trial; and we cannot afford enough courts quickly to try them. ✎

Tray's Thanksgiving

Karen Hanyo, 40, told her mother over Thanksgiving dinner that her life was improving. She had given up drugs, found a nice home to rent, and had a new job. The day before, one of Karen's adult children had given her a necklace with a charm frog on it. Karen's mother, Sally Smith, took Karen and her son's picture. Tray is four years old.

At 8:30 p.m. Sally took Karen and Tray home. They were all happy. Karen lived in the back apartment of a Monroeville, Pennsylvania, house belonging to her friend, Wanda Keener.

Jared Alan Moore, 19, and Melissa M. Galo, 26, had Thanksgiving dinner that day. Moore is a small time drug dealer who has been known to law enforcement since he was 14. Galo had been his girlfriend for two months. Their Thanksgiving dinner conversation centered around how to collect $50 that Hanyo owed Moore for drugs. They hatched a plan. They would make an example of Hanyo.

Karen Hanyo, 40, mother of little Tray and of two adult children.

Moore got his large hunting knife, and at 2:15 a.m. they forced open the door to Hanyo's apartment and held Hanyo, Tray and Keener at knifepoint. For 30 to 45 minutes, Moore and Galo terrorized the three, especially Hanyo, over the $50, which Hanyo did not have. They did stop a couple of times to make phone calls to other debtors and demand payment. Little Tray watched the whole ordeal.

Predators attack those who can't fight back

Tray's Thanksgiving

Jared Alan Moore and Melissa M. Galo are the type of predators that would terrorize a mother in front of her four-year-old boy and then stab her 30 times.

The two predators forced Hanyo to strip, and they put tape over her mouth and around her wrists. They forced her to walk naked to their car. Then, they taped her ankles and covered her with a coat. At 3:00 a.m., the two predators took Hanyo to another home. They showed Hanyo, bound up in the car, to a woman who lived there. The media has speculated that they may have been using Hanyo as an example to force the woman to pay her drug debt. Later, they took Hanyo behind a home improvement store. Galo says Moore stabbed Hanyo 30 times with the large hunting knife and slit her throat, and that he continued to stab her after she was obviously dead. Moore says he only stabbed Hanyo twice and that Galo did the rest. Moore told the police three different stories.

At 9:30 a.m. the next morning, 28 November 2003, a passerby in an auto discovered Hanyo's nude and shredded body. Police, trying to make identification, called Hanyo's adult daughter and described the frog charm. The daughter knew immediately that it was her mother. ✓

They are violent and you cannot lock them all up. What is your solution?

Kill-happy bank robbers

The two men on the left are Marcellus Levan Hernandez and Terron Vassell Vernon. Both have extensive gold-capped teeth. Police say they killed the bank teller on the right, Angela Towle, because she did not have the combination to the vault.

At 7:20 a.m. on the morning of 24 October 2003, Angela Towle, mother of two, arrived at a branch of the Bank of America in Roswell, Georgia. As usual, she was the first employee to arrive. Police say that as soon as she unlocked the door, two masked men dressed in black attacked her and forced her inside. They ordered her to open the vault.

Mrs. Towle was only the teller coordinator and did not have the combination. The predators shot her three times in the upper torso and once in the back of the head, left her behind the counter, stole her purse, and left. Angela Towle was pronounced dead at the hospital.

The police had only some security camera footage of two black figures and a magazine from a semi-automatic pistol.

At approximately 4:00 p.m. that day, a man used Mrs. Towle's credit card to send $1000 by wire. A woman tried to buy $427 in merchandise at a Wal-Mart. Police say she is Candace R. Gantt, and that they found Mrs. Towle's purse in a search of her apartment. They also found dark masks and clothing similar to that used in the robbery. Apparently, Gantt implicated Marcellus Levan Hernandez and Terron Vassell Vernon, who are from Orlando, Florida.

Acting on a series of tips, heavily armed police staked out a Quality Inn in Miami, Florida. After two days, there was no sign of Hernandez and Vernon. Police withdrew the team, leaving one officer. On 2 November, the motel manager spotted the men. They had been there all the time but had switched vehicles.

The manager told the remaining officer. A maid got the license number of the suspect's van. The officer followed their vehicle and called for back up. Every available car swarmed into the area. A wild chase ensued, with police cars pursuing, while others tried to head off the suspected predators. Finally, the fleeing vehicle rammed a police cruiser, injuring the policewoman driver. Vernon was also injured. Hernandez and Vernon were taken into custody. Despite each having a small fortune in gold in their mouths, they have been assigned public defenders.

Rosalind Clegg, Angela's Towle's coworker said, "She was one of the nicest people you'll ever meet. ... I couldn't tell you one bad thing about her 'cause there wasn't anything bad. She was a good mother. She was a good wife. She was a good bank employee. And, she was a good friend." Angela's husband Kevin said, "Angie was shot to death at her place of work when the people could have just walked away. ... To our family, this is a senseless act of pure evil." ✓

Miss Sallie killed working rural post office

Miss Sallie

In Fleming, Georgia, Sallie Louise Gaglia, 48, was known as "Miss Sallie," a term of endearment. Fleming is so small that it isn't even on the map. It has a one-room post office manned only by the postmistress. On Saturdays and when the postmistress is on vacation, a fill-in postmistress takes her place. Miss Sallie has been the fill-in postmistress for eight years. She and her husband have two children.

Meier Jason Brown, 32, knew Miss Sallie. On Saturday 20 November 2002, he rode his bicycle three miles to the Fleming post office to buy some postal money orders. But he didn't plan to pay. Instead, he planned to rob the post office after the money orders were prepared. Brown arrived at 10:45. He later said the money was for his girlfriend, and that appeared to be true. He confessed that he had white socks with him to cover his hands, and a four-inch steak knife to intimidate Miss Sallie. How he hoped to get away, when he knew Miss Sallie would recognize him in an instant, isn't clear.

Brown ordered three money orders totaling $1,175 (two for $500 and one for $175). Instead of paying for them, he pulled the steak knife. Miss Sallie froze. Brown leaped over the counter. He says, in doing so, he stumbled and accidentally stabbed Miss Sallie. "Damn," he said, as he panicked. Now, I have no choice except to kill her.

The predator attacked her like a psycho killer. He stabbed her at least 10 times. He was stabbing her so hard that he broke the tip off the knife. Either of two of the deep wounds would have been fatal. She was dead within 10 minutes. He stole the wallet out of her purse, the three money orders, and $1,195 in cash. Then he fled. Within a few minutes, a customer had found Miss Sallie's body.

Authorities soon interviewed Brown. After telling two lies, he told them the story above. In addition to his confession, his girlfriend has provided damning testimony. The stolen money orders were found in his or his girl friend's possession. Witnesses saw him going to the post office. Miss Sallie's blood was found on his coat and bicycle seat.

On Thursday 6 November 2003, a jury found Meier Jason Brown guilty, and he was sentenced to death the next day. His lawyer demanded a new trial and is planning several appeals.

Browns' primary defense was that it was an accident, that his father had abandoned him, and that he had grown up in poverty. In his taped confession, he was crying and said, "I'm not a bad person." Brown had only a minor police and court record.

Let's assume Brown's story is true. Here is a guy that tried to pull off a very stupid robbery. He freaked out and turned into a vicious killer ape. Then, he expected the jury to feel sorry for him.

What can we do? There are over 10 million adult Black males out there, and millions of them are much higher risks than Meier Brown was. ✓

Not a hate crime

On 5 November 2003, a White girl, 20, who we'll call Jane, attended the hip hop concert in Barton Hall at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. A Black girl said, "Get your white hair out of my face." Jane put her hair up, but two Black females attacked her and punched her. Jane moved to the back of the hall.

When the concert was over at 11:45 p.m., four Black females and a Black male confronted Jane outside. Apparently, these were friends/relatives of the two females that attacked her inside. They invited her to go to the parking lot. She refused. Later, Jane said, "They said they were gonna fuck up my pretty White face." The Blacks slapped, beat, and knocked her down. They kicked her unmercifully and hit her with a boot. The crowd did nothing. Finally, a Cornell policeman arrived. He didn't detain the attackers, who disappeared into the crowd.

One of Jane's eardrums was ruptured. It will take 18 months to heal. They did mess up her face. One cut near her mouth required 13 stitches. She had numerous other cuts and bruises. They pulled out a lot of Jane's hair.

The next day, when it became apparent that the campus cops weren't going to do anything, Jane talked to the media, and told them the story above. The Cornell Police basically told the media, "We heard there was some kind of an 'incident' and we're going to check into it." Soon the Cornell administration began issuing politically correct statements and promised an investigation.

Jane gave several interviews. Finally on about 23 November, the police made some "arrests." This consisted of giving two non-student juveniles tickets for third-degree assault and banning them from campus. Two Black females (apparently students) were cited for "harassment" but were not banned from campus. The Cornell police say it's definitely not a hate crime.

What if the reverse were true? For example: Suppose that a Black girl was attacked by Whites at a country and western concert and her face disfigured. ✓

Reuben Flint's murderer, Charlie Young, paroled

Reuben Flint

Charlie Young

Charlie Young, now 56, was a model prisoner. By a 3-2 vote in December 2003, the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles decided to let him out. Charlie was convicted of killing Reuben Flint back in 1975.

Reuben Flint, 57, was an old fashioned White Southerner. He always wore a White shirt and tie. He even wore them under his bib overalls when he worked on his small farm. Reuben was a banker by trade and was known as "the nicest man in Greene County." He was a vice president at the tiny Farmer's Bank in Union Point. Union Point had only 1600 people, and they all new Reuben. In 1975, he and his wife Patricia celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary.

Only Charlie Young, then 28, knows what exactly happened in December 1975. Charlie said he went to Reuben's house to talk about a loan he had made. Reuben was wearing a white shirt, tie, and dress pants. Charlie's story is that Reuben reached into a kitchen drawer to pull a gun. So Charlie shot him with his own .22 handgun, by accident, he says. There was no gun in the drawer. Charlie says, I "panicked and just went crazy."

Charlie shot him three more times. Reuben was lying on the floor shot full of holes and Charlie jumped on him, bashing Reuben's head into the wall numerous times. Then, Charlie beat Reuben in the head with his pistol. He beat him so hard and so long that he bent the barrel of the pistol. Charlie stole Reuben's wallet and left. It probably took Reuben 30 minutes to die alone on his kitchen floor. Police and those who have seen the crime scene photos say it was a horrible murder, a pool of blood on the floor and blood splattered all over the walls and cabinets.

Charlie got his nephew, Derwin Young, and they went to the bank. Derwin showed the wallet to the tellers and demanded $60,000 ransom for Reuben Flint, whom he claimed to have hostage. A teller hit the silent alarm and gave Derwin a bag of money. When Derwin walked outside the bank, first thing he saw was the business end of the town cop's shotgun. Derwin Young spent 11 years in prison.

Charlie Young was caught and confessed to the story above. He was sentenced to death. Three times his execution was stayed. Finally, a judge found a technicality, which eventually resulted in Charlie getting a life sentence. Now he is out on parole.

Patricia Reuben still lives in the same house and the kitchen reminds her of that horrible day. She has never remarried and never took Reuben's name off her telephone listing. She says she remembers the fun of being his wife, the smiles, and the love. ♣

Trooper in fatal gun battle in Gary

On 22 December 2003, Indiana State Police received several calls reporting a white Chevrolet Caprice driving on four flat tires on the Interstate in Gary, Indiana. Three-year veteran Trooper Scott A. Patrick, 27, went to help the motorist.

Patrick found the car abandoned on an off-ramp and saw a man, believed to be Darryl J. Jeter, 19, of nearby Chicago, walking away. Patrick stopped his car and went to talk to the man. A tractor-trailer pulled up, and its driver witnessed the attack. He saw Patrick wrestling with the man. Patrick either got off a partial message, or his shoulder microphone got keyed during the fight. In any event, Trooper Jeff Gruber, 24, a two-year veteran raced to the scene.

The truck driver saw Jeter facing toward him so he turned on his high beams to blind him. Jeter broke away from Patrick and drew a hidden handgun and began spraying lead at Patrick. Patrick was hit in the neck but managed to get off one shot from his service pistol.

About that time, the second trooper showed up. [Gary's police force has collapsed, and the troopers heavily patrol this 90+% Black city]. The truck's driver ran to help Trooper Patrick, and a second tractor trailer pulled up behind the first. Its driver also tried to assist.

One of the drivers told Trooper Gruber that Jeter was hiding behind the double wheels of the second tractor trailer. When Gruber went to arrest Jeter, Jeter jumped into the truck's cab but was unable to get it in gear. Gruber shouted for Jeter to surrender. When Jeter made threatening moves, Gruber opened fire on the cab, shattering the driver's side window and putting several holes in the door.

Jeter was taken to the hospital with numerous gunshot wounds none of which were life-threatening. One of Trooper Patrick's major arteries was severed and he died in surgery 32 minutes after the shooting. Patrick's wife is pregnant. Trooper Patrick is another decent man lost in the war against the predators. ♣

Another Chinese selling our secret technology to Red China

Gao Zhan is having the last laugh, again. America. What a country!

The Politically Correct version:

Gao Zhan is a Red Chinese citizen who has lived in the U.S. since 1989. She was an unknown professor of sociology at American University. Then in 2001, while she was visiting China, the Chinese Reds arrested Gao for spying for Taiwan. President Bush and Colin Powell raised hell with the Chinese and demanded her release. This was at a time of high tensions when the Reds had captured a U.S. airplane accused of spying.

The Chinese convicted Goa, then deported her to the U.S. Everyone was happy. Back teaching at American University, she became an international celebrity, a dissident attacking the Red Chinese government. Then suddenly in November 2003, she pleaded guilty to selling critical microprocessors to the Chinese government. The processors were the old 486 DX2, which had been obsolete for years. But the ones she sold were built to military specification and could take extremes of heat, cold, vibration, etc. In fact, they are ideal for the targeting devices inside the Red's ICBMs, which are aimed at us. She was paid $6,741 for each of the processors that, other than their military durability, are obsolete junk worth a few cents each.

Goa and her husband also pleaded guilty to income tax evasion for not reporting the profit from the sale. All told, she can only get 30-37 months for her crimes. But wait, the prosecutors say she has helped them, and they want a sentence even lower than that. That is all one can learn from most of the media, but there is more.

In 2001 President Bush threatened, pleaded with, and begged Red Chinese President Jiang Zemin to Release Gao Zhan. Zemin laughed so hard at Bush that he couldn't look Bush in the face.

The plot thickens: How in the heck does a sociology professor get in the microprocessor exporting business, especially to a government that she claims to hate?

When did Goa make the exports? Which years did she cheat on her taxes about the payments she got from the Reds? Was she exporting before Bush and Powell came to her aid?

Keep in mind that Gao Zhan was in Chinese custody from 11 February to 26 July 2001. It turns out that her crimes were before she went to China.

In July 2000, she tried to buy the microprocessors through one of her front companies. They turned her down because these items are a controlled defense item, and her firm looked shady. In September, she successfully bought them through another front company and had them shipped to her home. She shipped them to China.

On 11 February 2001 [seven months later] the Reds arrest her in China. Pravda says the FBI had already been suspicious of her for months and searched her house during her trip to China.

Chinese-language newspapers in Asia claim the Reds knew the FBI was closing in on their little source to the microprocessors. So, the Reds arrested

Goa on her trip to China and charged her with spying for Taiwan. If the U.S. demanded that that China extradite her to be tried for exporting the microprocessors, the Reds could just say she's accused of more serious crimes here in China.

When Powell, Bush, the media, celebrities, etc., came to Goa's aid, they fell into the Reds' hands. Obviously, the FBI didn't find anything in their search, or they wouldn't be trying to help her. Meanwhile, back in the U.S., Goa's Chinese husband was declared a citizen on 30 March. Eight days later on 7 April, he filed the crooked income tax that failed to report the profits from the illegal sales to China.

On 26 July 2001, the Reds simply let her go. She arrived back in the U.S. as a great human rights leader, hailed like Caesar returning to Rome. She was to be declared a U.S. citizen in a great Capital Hill ceremony.

On 2 August 2001, less than a week later, the ceremony was canceled.

Things were quiet until 26 November 2003, when Gao Zhan, human rights superhero, pleaded guilty to miniscule charges.

Did the U.S. government push minimal punishment of her to avoid what would come out at her trial?

Summary & Comment: A Chinese sold critical microprocessors to China and went virtually unpunished. It appeared that this Chinese was more loyal to a Chinese government that she hates, than to an American government that she loves. Blood is thicker than water. Our government — through corruption, incompetence, and treachery — is building China into a superpower that will be a greater threat than the Soviet Union ever was. ✎

Indiana issues thousands of fraudulent driver's licenses

Elizabeth Lang is a Chinese citizen, who may have helped 1,000 of her countrymen obtain fraudulent Indiana driver's licenses. Police are not sure if her motive was purely monetary.

The Speedway Branch of the Indiana Bureau of Motor Vehicles experienced an increase in Chinese-only speaking applicants for driver's licenses, and they were expecting further increases. Elizabeth Lang, 39, a Chinese Citizen married to an American, volunteered to be an interpreter. What a godsend she was, because soon Chinese driver's license applicants began pouring in.

On 10 November she and six other Chinese were arrested at the Speedway Branch. Authorities know she helped 100 Chinese get driver's licenses with false IDs, and they believe the number could run as high as 1,000. Lang placed ads in a Chicago Chinese newspaper and Yang Chengdoing of New York sent clients to her. Chengdoing made about $540 each from the Chinese he sent to Lang, and she made between $200 and $300.

Police caught Lang because another BMV employee, who was caught on unrelated drug and theft charges, ratted on her. In that employee's house, police found phony immigration documents, narcotics, and fraudulently-obtained license plates and auto titles. They refuse to release her name.

Police are confused as to Lang's motive. When they raided her home they found piles of cash, some $15,000. They also found 53 credit cards in other people's names, several passports, and classified BMV records. Her motive may have been more than money.

Yan Zhang, 27, is a Chinese citizen living in Chicago. This is part of the passport she presented when Elizabeth Lang took her to get an Indiana driver's license. Federal ICE (INS) agents believe this is a fake passport.

Authorities checked further and soon arrested Hugo Santos, Ricardo W. Herrera, and Kamila Saxova. The ICE (INS) agents say the three were helping people from Mexico, Pakistan, Russia, and Bulgaria get fraudulent licenses and IDs. Santos is an illegal alien from Mexico. Authorities found document-making equipment in his home. Herrera, 41, a Peruvian citizen, was in the U.S. legally, as was Saxova, 36, from Slovenia.

In Indiana, the police do not arrest those who try to get a driver's license with fake ID. The person can leave and try again later. If someone gets caught using a fake or fraudulently obtained driver's license, they are rarely arrested. Instead, the officer gives them a ticket and confiscates the bad license.

During the week 8 to 12 December, officers arrested eight more people using false IDs to get driver's licenses. Facing felony charges for using fake ID and/or document forgery are Alejandro Colula, 23; Jose Perez, 22; Erica Leon, 24; Teresa Cano-Perez, 34; Eduardo Cruz, 27; Juan Guevara, 53; and Armando Guevara, 26.

Marion County prosecutors say six DMV employees are suspected of taking bribes in exchange for fraudulent driver's licenses. None have been named. He says the investigation is expanding. Tens of thousands of fraudulent driver's licenses may have been issued to foreigners. As many as 12 identity-fraud rings are operating just in Indianapolis. ✎

Missouri Catholic Festival Vietnamese style

One of the Catholic groups that meets on the campus of the Congregation of Mother of Co-redemptrix near Carthage, Missouri, is the Vietnamese, who are there for four days in August. Most camp in tents on the campus.

The highlight of the campus is the statue of Mary in the Our Lady of Queen Peace Garden. It has many beds of carefully tended, beautiful flowers and memorial plaques. It is a quiet place where children play while adults contemplate the beauty of the campus.

On 8 August 2003, the Vietnamese were there. At 5:00 a.m. in the garden, the stillness of the night was broken by the sounds of a major fight complete with curses in Vietnamese, breaking beer bottles, and blood curdling screams. Two Vietnamese gangs were battling it out. Police, who had the campus surrounded, rushed in, but it was too late. Twenty or more combatants disappeared into the squalid tent city leaving Quoc Phu Pham, 22, surrounded by flowers to bleed to death at the very feet of Mary. He had been stabbed numerous times. The police kept 26 officers there while the Vietnamese continued the last three days of celebration of Marian Days.

This is the first killing at this Vietnamese Catholic festival since Bao Kha Hoang, 17, was gunned down in 1995. ✎

Wichita Vietnamese strike back

On 5 October 2003, some Vietnamese were cruising past the Kim Huong Vietnamese Restaurant in Wichita, Kansas. They spotted a car with Oklahoma license plates, and six to eight young men went inside to see who had invaded their territory. They confronted Tony Chou, 20, of Tulsa and shot him twice in the abdomen; he survived. Police believe it was in retaliation for the killing at the Carthage, Missouri, Catholic festival. ✎

40 Korean whorehouses in Colorado

Federal, state, and local police say there are 40 Korean sex-slave brothels in Colorado. This is the first major operation broken in Colorado since the mid-1990s, when hundreds of whores from Thailand, China, South Korea, and Malaysia were operating in a giant ring.

But after two years of investigation, authorities have only busted a couple of Colorado brothels and arrested only eight of the prostitutes. They claim this entire operation is orchestrated out of South Korea and has been set up in the last two years. It is part of a chain of several hundred Korean whorehouses in the Western United States. Yet, the Federal government's investigators have not arrested one person or even issued a warrant.

The brothels are called spas and operate under such names as Ace Spa, Aloha Spa, Ann Spa, Cosmos Spa, Ginza Spa, Maize Spa, Spring Spa, Sun Gold Spa, Ten Essentials and VIP Salon.

The Korean syndicate smuggles in the whores and smuggles millions in cash back to Korea. Each week, the brothel managers meet to discuss business and make exchanges of girls. Each brothel has a "cleaning lady" who takes the money from the girls, distributes drugs, and fake IDs, and does other managerial chores. Sometimes these madams or mamasans have another manager working above them, and sometimes they are in charge of the brothel.

The girls are brought in as whores. They are not kidnapped. Yet, police say they are not free to leave. They work as hookers for two years and then are turned loose with false IDs, etc. Some start their own spas; some remain prostitutes.

The Korean brothels use elaborate systems to spot cops and the girls do not speak aloud for fear of being tape recorded propositioning a customer. Instead, they pantomime the offer. Depending on the service, prices range from $40 to $200 per trick.

The prostitutes are moved from brothel to brothel every few weeks. That way, the law has a hard time catching up with them. When the police show up, the cleaning lady just says we have all new girls and they are not prostitutes.

Amazingly, by Federal law, foreign prostitutes cannot be held in jail. This is because all they have to do is say they were forced into it or they were not free to leave. All of this is part of the Federal Trafficking Victims Protection Act of 2000. Instead, they are issued special T-visas. Money for them is funneled by the Feds through "human rights" groups who take a cut. But money is running out because Congress underestimated the number of foreign whores who would "cooperate."

There are even do-gooder groups that help these "prostitutes" or "sex-slaves" avoid prosecution and help them stay in the U.S. One such group is the Katherine Chon's Polaris Project.

Somewhere between 20,000 and 50,000 children and women are brought into the U.S. as prostitutes each year. And as George Bush says, "They just come here to work." ✎

Mexican girls work harder

Colorado's Mexican whorehouse managers consider the Asian girls to be lazy. Groups, like the Cadena human smuggling ring, pack dozens of girls into a trailer park and expect the girls to do 20 tricks per night, seven days per week. Kooki Sino-Jap

"relations" on D-Day

Kooki, a Japanese construction company, scheduled an orgy to be held at the five-star hotel, the Zhuhai International in China. Prostitution is open and big business in Asia.

The 288 Jap males, ages 16 to 37, started the orgy on 16 September 2003, which was to climax on 18 September. Approximately, 500 of China's whores were waiting and earned from $145 to $215 a night.

The entire hotel was in bedlam with sex starting in the lobby and karaoke bar and ending up in rooms. Few bothered even to close the doors. Other guests at the hotel were shocked, especially at the unusual sex acts.

Chinese officials finally had enough because 18 September was the anniversary of the 1931 Japanese invasion of Manchuria. [The day is called "the day of shame." Manchuria has been occupied by China since 1945]. Apparently, the whole orgy was timed to this event as a fun way of reenacting the invasion. The Chinese took this as an insult.

The Chinese said the hotel had "lost face" for China and closed the 530-room luxury hotel. The Japanese promised an investigation. They said there were so many of these "tourist" groups in China that they couldn't figure out which one the Chinese were complaining about.

The Chinese began closed-door trials of the eight madames or mamis that furnished the 500 whores.

On 17 December 2003, a Chinese court sentenced the hotel manager and the head prostitute to life in prison. The court handed out sentences varying from two to 15 years to 12 other Chinese. From crime to sentencing took only 90 days. China is demanding that Japan extradite three Japanese citizens to stand trial for arranging the "companions."

Thunderbolt does not normally cover international events. This incident shows the Oriental mind. Mass prostitution of women to foreigners at top hotels is OK, unless it done on the Jap's D-Day. ✎

Asian sex-slave rings in America

Brave Berkeley woman exposes deadly sex-slave ring

Lakireddy Bali Reddy just before he pleaded guilty.

On 31 October 2003, the last of the notorious Reddy sex slave criminals accepted a plea bargain. Lakireddy Bali Reddy is a filthy rich landlord, construction magnate, and restaurant owner in Berkeley, California.

It all started on 24 November 1999 when a White woman, Marcia Poole, spotted some Indian men carrying a rolled up carpet to a Reddy Realty van. It sagged in the middle and a leg stuck out. Poole stopped and ran to the van. By this time, 10 Indian men and women were trying to force a terrified Indian girl into the van. Others might have been scared away, but Poole confronted the whole group blocking their path.

Poole ran to a passing car and begged them to call the police. She ran back to the van and was confronted by Lakireddy Bali Reddy, who told her it was just a family matter. It was a family matter but not "just" a family matter. Poole stopped another car and begged them to call the police. Then Poole jumped back into the fray. By this time, the police and paramedics were on their way, and the Indians scattered like a bunch of cockroaches when a light is turned on.

Police and paramedics discovered the body of a girl, Chanti Prantipatti, 17. She was a sex slave Reddy had imported from India. She had died of carbon monoxide poisoning from a faulty heater in one of Reddy's apartments.

Authorities began investigating and found that Reddy and his clan had brought in at least 24 illegal aliens to work as indentured servants and sex slaves in his empire. One sex slave was only 15. The sex slaves also worked long hours as janitors and in construction.

Five of the Reddys were charged. Bonds of up to $1 million were quickly posted while the family awaited trial. Many of the more lurid charges were dropped as part of the five's Federal plea bargains.

In 2001, Lakireddy Bali Reddy, 66, pleaded guilty to two counts of importing minors for immoral sexual purposes, one count of tax fraud, and one count to commit immigration fraud. He was ordered to pay the illegals $2 million and was sentenced to eight years in prison. In India, Reddy lived in a mud hut but is now worth about $60 million.

In 2002, Vijay Lakireddy, 34, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit visa fraud and was sentenced to two years in prison. Vijay Lakireddy is the son of Reddy.

In 2001, Jayaprakash Lakireddy pleaded guilty to one count of immigration fraud, was fined $30,000, and was sentenced to a year in Federal prison. He is the brother of Reddy.

In 2001, Annapurna Lakireddy pleaded guilty to one count of immigration fraud, and she was sentenced to six months home detention and a

In October 2003, Prasad Lakireddy, 44, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to employ unauthorized aliens. If his bargain is approved by a Federal judge in February 2004, he will get five years probation (including one year of house arrest), pay a $20,000 fine, and perform 300 hours of community service. The more serious charges against him were dropped. Prasad Lakireddy is another son of Reddy.

63-year-old report finally released

The 800-person Asian orgy (see page 16) is large by today's standard. However, mass Asian prostitution is hardly new. In November 2003, the U.S. finally released its Secret report on the Japanese use of comfort women. The 36-page report was issued 15 November 1945.

The Japanese government has always claimed that it did not know about the comfort women and claimed that they were just isolated operations done by civilians. However, the report shows that the Japanese military not only licensed but also supervised the "comfort stations." Up to 400,000 Asian women were in the comfort stations. Many were tricked into it, but many were just prostitutes to start with.

Captured White women were treated far worse than the comfort women. The Japanese raped, tortured, and hideously abused them. In 1945, if we had nuked every Japanese man, woman, and child, it would not have been too severe a punishment.

The U.S. has groveled and begged forgiveness for putting Japanese in internment camps. In those camps, the Japanese were paid for work and lived in new houses under reasonable conditions. None starved or was abused. American guards protected them from any harm by Americans.

The Japanese refuse to admit any guilt for the comfort women or its other atrocities. And truthfully, who cares? An apology from them is worthless. Apologies, in general, are meaningless. The Japs insist that we apologize but refuse to do so themselves, which tells you a lot about the Oriental mentality. ♪

Bush OKs 14,400 more Hmong refugees: St. Paul's disaster grows worse

On 17 December 2003, the Bush administration announced that it will empty out another Hmong "refugee" camp by importing them. Wat Thamkrabok camp has 14,400 residents, and all will be allowed to come to the U.S., except the ones the U.S. can prove have serious criminal records or HIV/AIDS. Inside the U.S., the Bush administration will pay for all their visa work. Usually, immigrants have to hire their own immigration attorneys.

Almost 30 years ago, the Hmong fled Laos. They fought as mercenaries for the U.S., and they lost their war to overthrow the Laotian government. A large number camped inside the grounds of the Buddhist Temple at Wat Thamrabok, where they were surrounded by Thailand's army. It is essentially a concentration camp. About 1,000 of the inmates have work permits and are allowed to leave the camp during the day for that purpose. The Hmong complain that there is no international aid organization in the camp to provide for them.

Inside the camp, they are breeding like flies, and the population is exploding. The Hmong practice polygamy, and the females wed, even before they are old enough to get pregnant.

In Saint Paul, Minnesota, the Hmong, churches, politicians, and the media, want to make sure they get their share of "refugees," which they calculate to be 4,000 to 8,000. Minnesota already has between 40,000 and 70,000 Hmong. Minnesota and Wisconsin are the destinations of choice for Hmong, and fully one-third of the elementary students in St. Paul are Hmong. Wisconsin Republicans back $3 million for a Hmong cultural center

The battle over the proposed Hmong cultural center rages on in Wisconsin. In July 2003, the Republicans were having trouble getting their budget passed in the Wisconsin Senate. So they cut a deal with a Democrat, Gary George of Milwaukee. They slipped in $3 million for a Hmong cultural center grant. Senator George's vote was the key vote in getting the budget passed. There are about 40,000 Hmong and related Laotian tribesmen in Wisconsin.

These cultural centers are not museum-like or history-like buildings. Instead, they are just meeting places for a minority. Activists can hang out there and have meetings there. On university campuses, what were called Black student unions 30 years ago, are now called African-American cultural centers.

Governor Jim Doyle line-item vetoed the Hmong center from the budget. Oh, he's for giving the Hmong the $3 million, but he wants to do it his way. It now appears the legislature will again pass the Hmong cultural center, and the Governor says he will veto it. Eventually, the politicians will compromise, and Hmong will be given the $3 million for their "party place."

Meanwhile ex-Senator Gary George, a Black, has been arrested by the Federal government and has been charged with defrauding the government of $400,000. Isn't mass democracy great? ♣

The Hmong's Wisconsin benefactor, Gary George (left), was kicked out of the Wisconsin Senate in an October 2003 recall election. Worst hepatitis C outbreak in history occurs in Fremont, Nebraska

The largest known epidemic of hepatitis C occurred at a small cancer clinic in Fremont, Nebraska. Dr. Tahir Javed, who was in charge, is now back in Pakistan. Dr. Javed insists he did nothing wrong. He says the whole thing is just part of the anti-Muslim campaign in America due to the 9-11 World Trade Center attack. And besides, he says, the unsafe practices were done by his employees and not him personally.

Investigations into possible criminal misconduct continue, but it appears that Dr. Javed will escape any punishment. His patients have filed 81 lawsuits, but how do you collect from someone in Pakistan?

Numerous doctors and nurses had warned Dr. Javed of his unsafe medical practices, some of which are mentioned in the following timeline.

1988 – Tahir Javed graduates from medical school in Pakistan and completes residencies in South Carolina and New York.

1997 – Dr. Javed opens his clinic in Fremont, Nebraska.

1999 – The clinic's receptionist, who had prior training as a dental assistant, tells Dr. Javed that he is not following proper infection control procedures. [Imagine a place so unsafe that a receptionist tells a doctor he is a hazard.]

March 2000 – A man with a rare form of hepatitis C, known as genotype 3a, receives cancer treatment at the clinic. Medical authorities believe the clinic spread the disease from him to other patients. Likely, a nurse gave him two injections from a large bottle using the same needle. The first injection infected the needle. When the nurse stuck the needle back into the bottle to get the second injection, the entire bottle was infected. Every patient who was later given an injection from that bottle was given an injection of hepatitis C.

2000-2001 – Dr. Javed orders hepatitis tests on a number of patients. For some of these, there is no evidence in their file of any reason to do so. The Omaha World-Herald found seven such patients and concludes that Javed secretly knew of the outbreak and was trying to determine its extent. But he failed to tell the patients the results. Several patients also recall that other tests showed "elevated liver enzymes," but they received no warning from Dr. Javed. Elevated liver enzymes is a predictor of hepatitis C, and most doctors seeing it would immediately order a hepatitis C test.

March 2001 – A doctor in charge of infection control at the Fremont Area Medical Center tells Dr. Javed that Dr. Javed's patients are complaining about bad medical practices, including reusing syringes. The medical center is the local hospital, and Dr. Javed rented space in it for his clinic.

April 2001 – The Missouri Valley Cancer Consortium [MVCC] inspects Javed's clinic. The following month they tell him orally about improper infection control practices but do not report him to the state.

May 2001 – The MVCC writes the Fremont Area Medical Center and warns them of Javed's unsafe practices.

11 September 2001 – World Trade Center is attacked

December 2001 – Authorities now believe that the spread of Hepatitis stopped during this month.

July 2002 – Dr. Javed said his mother is sick and slipped out of the U.S. back to Pakistan. In Pakistan, he was elected minister of health for Punjab, where he is responsible for the health of 78 million people.

September 2002 – An Omaha doctor complained to Nebraska medical authorities that two of his patients that had gone to the Javed's clinic contracted hepatitis C. This was the first person to act against Javed. All Nebraska medical people are required to report suspected problems to the state within 30 days. Up to this time, other area doctors had warned

Dr. Tahir Javed came to the U.S. from Pakistan to work. So far he is known to have caused 99 cases of hepatitis C, including one death. He is now back in the Third World where he belongs.

Dr. Javed of similar problems but none of them contacted the state.

October 2002 – Nebraska notifies 612 patients to come in for Hepatitis C tests. Of the 485 who are tested, 82 test positive for hepatitis C.

October 2002 – The clinic shuts down.

7 March 2003 – Cheryl Gentry, 47, dies awaiting a liver transplant. She was one of Dr. Javed's patients who tested positive for hepatitis and died of "cirrhosis with complications, secondary to hepatitis C virus infection." She is the first of Dr. Javed patients to be killed by hepatitis. It can take 20 years for cirrhosis to develop from hepatitis.

June 2003 – Another 17 of Javed patients test positive for hepatitis. So far, the known total is 99.

1 October 2003 – Dr. Javed's medical license in Nebraska is revoked.

At some point, Dr. Javed was also accused of sexual misconduct by a patient. He responded that the allegation is "below the belt."

Yes, it probably was below the belt. And the medical practice of Dr. Javed and his imported medical personnel are below our standard. ✎

The next month, his privileges there were suspended, pending investigation. Dr. Srungaram resigned and moved to another Houston hospital.

On Monday, 5 November 2003, a woman and her daughter were returning to their quiet middle-class neighborhood in Mira Mesa, California. They surprised a burglar who was ransacking their home. He tied the mother up and stabbed her several times in the chest and the face. He stuffed her in a closet. He raped the daughter. Then, he kidnapped them and stole their 2003 Ford Explorer.

He stopped at several locations and finally dumped the mother and daughter out at one of them. The mother was taken to a hospital and survived. A resident where the predator dumped the two recognized him as Arnel Castellones De La Cruz, 32, a Filipino immigrant.

He abandoned the Explorer and stole a 1992 Chevy pickup and headed for Texas. Two days later near Amarillo, he stopped at a mobile home and asked a woman to hide him. She refused, and he roared away. She called the cops. Before the police could find him, he headed back to Interstate 40. Man gets away with murder: Friends perjure themselves

The first four men from the left were convicted of perjury for lying in a murder trial. The man on the far left is Campbell Alefaio, a former high school football star. He was acquitted of first-degree murder when he and the other three testified that another man did the shooting. The three men in the middle are, from left to right, Fred Titilii, Alaivaa Tauese, Jr., and Todd Titilii. Prosecutors alleged that the man on the right, Puni Alefaio, Campbell's older brother, was the mastermind of the perjury plot. He was not convicted.

On 29 March 1997, Ann Marie Harris was visiting friends in Tacoma, Washington. She was a high school senior from Mount Vernon, Virginia, on Spring break. Miss Harris was a passenger in a car with three friends that was being followed by a car with four Tahitian men. The Tahitians say the other car flashed its brakes at them. One of the Tahitian men opened fire. A bullet hit the taillight of the car Miss Harris was in. It passed through the trunk, the rear seat and killed Miss Harris.

Campbell Alefaio, 19, confessed that he did the shooting and the other three men in the Tahitian car corroborated his statement. He was tried for the first-degree murder of Miss Harris and reckless endangerment of her friends. He faced up to 35 years in prison.

Campbell Alefaio pleaded innocent and his trial turned out to be a disaster for the prosecution. During the trial, Alefaio and the three others testified that it was really Kenneth Tuialuuluu who did the shooting. Alefaio was acquitted.

The prosecution gave up, but Miss Harris' parents hired a law firm to force prosecution for perjury. Finally, Lawrence Fetui turned states evidence. He said that Campbell Alefaio did, in fact, kill Miss Harris and that he (Fetui) was at a meeting where all four witnesses agreed to change their testimony and blame it on Tuialuuluu. Prosecutors say the plot was hatched by Puni Alefaio, Campbell's older brother.

The perjury trial of five of the seven Tahitians was started in December 2002. Four were convicted. We were unable to learn what happened to the fifth man charged, Puni Alefaio. In April 2003, Campbell Alefaio was given a maximum sentence of 15 years. Fred Titilii got 10 years, and Alaivaa Tauese, Jr. and Todd Titilii each got five years.

Campbell Alefaio probably will not be in prison long. He stands a good chance of getting his maximum sentence reduced and, in any event, will be eligible for parole before 15 years.

Only because Miss Harris' parents had the money and persistence to force the perjury charges, did this Tahitian mob get punished. As it is, Campbell Alefaio got away with murder. ✎

1. Jilted beauty guns down filthy rich, lecherous reprobate 2. Gold digger murders innocent and ideal family man

The second headline was the type that dominated the Denver media for days after Teresa Perez murdered Justyn Rosen. The first one is about as accurate and is intended to even the score approximately.

Seven years ago, Teresa Perez and Justyn Rosen started a relationship. She was 33 and a saleswoman at his Ford dealership, but soon became a kept woman. He provided her with a $900 per month apartment and living expenses. He gave her a car, and the apartment was furnished expensively.

Justyn Rosen married into the Denver car business 50 years ago. For a while he lived in Nebraska, but returned to Denver because there were no Jews in Nebraska for his kids to grow up with. He was married to the same woman for 60 years. Rosen built his business into one of Colorado's top Ford dealerships.

The media claims he was a great philanthropist, but there is little indication that he ever gave large sums to anyone except Jewish causes, especially the National Jewish Medical and Research Center.

He was a secretive man, whose life focused mostly on his business. He had about 100 people working for him at any one time and had a vast network of extended family and friends. He was a pillar of the Denver business community. Yet only 300 turned up for his funeral.

His family claims it was only a friendship, a nice old guy helping out a young woman and that she was a common gold digger. Her friends say that's hardly the case, and that this was the first and only man she ever truly loved. They also say he promised to dump his wife and marry her, but never got around to it.

Then, Mr. Rosen got cancer. He was done for and apparently lost interest in her. He tried to cut off the relationship, but she was persistent and refused. She was now forty and thought she had given him her best years.

Justyn Rosen, the big shot car dealer, was afraid of her. She didn't hesitate to use her fists. Even in his best day, she could probably have whipped him. As he continued to try to push her away, she grew more aggressive. She wrote his wife a letter that included a packet of information on Mr. Rosen that has never been made public. Teresa threatened to send similar packets to his family.

Rosen got his lawyer, Craig Silverman to write her a threatening letter. It said she would be exposed for her past criminal record. She had stolen a camcorder from a boyfriend after an argument.

Apparently, the letter caused her to realize it was all over. She began talking about suicide and told her foster mother that for her it was all over. Perez wrote her final goodbye letters to her children.

On 2 October 2003, Rosen and Silverman got a restraining order against her, but police were unable to find her to serve it. Just before 6:00 p.m. on 3 October, she drove to Rosen's home and kidnapped him at gunpoint. She was drunk.

Perez forced Rosen to drive. Where they were going and for what purpose, we'll never know. We'll also never know how it might have ended because Rosen made a sudden decision. As they passed a police station, he pulled into the parking lot, leapt from the vehicle and screamed for help.

The order in which things happened next isn't exactly clear. We'll give Rosen and the police the benefit of the doubt. Officer Randy Yoder had just gotten off

Teresa Perez, born Teresa Garrett, was the product of two apparently bad people. Her mother and father split up in California when she was three and her little sister was just a baby. Her father moved the girls to Ohio, but after two years abandoned them to a foster family. Keep in mind that this is in 1968. The family had ten kids of their own and no running water in the house.

Teresa grew up a tomboy who could hunt, trap, and play sports. She was a fighter, a girl who was a crack shot and not afraid to use her fists. Apparently, she was not very bright. She was, however, an exceptionally beautiful woman.

At 16, she moved to another foster home. At 19, she moved to Denver to be with her dad. His woman demanded that she leave and threw her clothes out. Her father threw Teresa out on the street.

She saw love, security, and money as all one and the same. She married four times, always to older men with money. The last one was named Perez. Teresa had two children, a boy who is 14 and a girl who is 20.

duty but had his pistol. Rosen yelled, "She has a gun." Teresa put the gun to her head. Rosen was apparently trying to sneak away by crawling.

Police say, she chased Rosen around the side of a vehicle and shot him. Then she and Yoder got into a gun battle. Her bullet grazed him, and he went down, not seriously injured but out of action. Officer Randy Perez (no relation) hit the pavement and started firing at her, under a vehicle, at her legs. According to the coroner, Officer Perez and Teresa each shot Rosen at least twice. He was shot a total of 15 times, but exactly who hit him the other 11 times will never be known. Captain Joe Padilla also opened fire on Teresa. She went down in the crossfire firing her 9 mm. There were dozens of shots fired. She and Rosen were both dead.

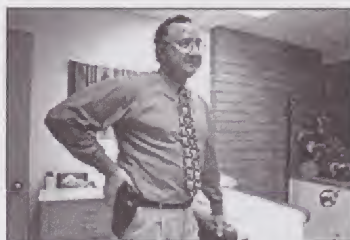

Teresa Perez was the perpetrator. But killing her was not enough. Rosen's paid mouthpiece began assassinating the dead woman in the media. Craig Silverman and the media painted her as a 100% gold digger and him as a 100% innocent family man. His rabbi even claimed Rosen was a hero who had saved Yoder's life. The news media was dominated by two terms "Silverman" and "gold digger."

I feel sorry for Rosen's family. In one day, they found out that Mr. Rosen had not only been murdered but also that he was a dirty old man. He pretended to be the loving husband of his wife of 60 years, while sneaking around like a weasel. Rosen was a creature that would, on one hand, promise to marry a woman, and on the other hand slip $100 bills under her door.

No amount of posturing by shyster Silverman, the media, or the Denver Jewish community can change what Rosen was finally exposed to be. Rosen was also a fool. Any man who trifles with a woman in her late 30s is tempting fate. Rosen thought his money could buy him women and buy him lawyers to get rid of those women. He was wrong, dead wrong.

Rosen and Teresa Perez deserved each other and America is a better place since they are both gone. ✎

Jury finds Dr. Finkel guilty

Dr. Brian Finkel carried a gun and wore an armored vest at his clinic. He hated anti-abortion activists, calling them "mean-spirited, hate-filled Christians engaged in guerrilla warfare" and "religious racketeers." He would taunt the demonstrators outside his clinic, nearly provoking violence. Howard Stern, the Jewish radio shock jock, proclaimed Finkel a hero for Finkel's stand against anti-abortion demonstrators.

On 2 December 2003, Dr. Brian Finkel was convicted of 22 counts of sexual abuse of his female abortion patients. The jury found insufficient evidence to convict him of another 34 counts. More than 60 women had come forward to complain about Finkel. He testified for five days and insisted that his perverted examinations were normal medical procedure.

He started his abortion practice in 1986, and women complained four times between 1987 and 1991. The Arizona Board of Osteopathic Examiners in Medicine and Surgery dismissed the charges.

Finkel used his abrupt and rough manner to intimidate many of the women into not complaining. This is what is known as chutzpah.

Dr. Finkel personally performed 30,000 abortions. His crude and rude manner offended his women patients as well as many others with whom he came in contact. Finkel is the kind of Jew that makes Alan Dershowitz look like a polished gentlemen. Finkel's lawyer, Richard Gierloff, claimed victory because Finkel was not convicted on all counts. And he says he plans to appeal. ✎

Dr. Scumbag glowers at his women accusers while the jury's verdicts are read. Each time jurors found "guilty," the women would applaud, breaking Finkel's stoic manner. During the trial, Finkel smiled and waved at the women. He winked at one of his accusers as she testified. She broke down into tears, and the judge had to call a recess to give her time to compose herself. Finkel, who had been free on bond, was led out of the courtroom in handcuffs. The women cheered.

If you are opposed to abortion of our kin's babies, then look into the eyes of a mass murderer. If not, then look at a perverted doctor whose women patients called him a scumbag in court.

Oxycontin available

Democrat Primary Ballot 2003

Dropped out, 2 February

Since the Jews provide 50% of the Democrats' money why shouldn't they have three of the ten candidates seeking the Democratic presidential nomination?

Wesley Clark (shown top fingering the flag) is the latest entrant. He claims that he is the only Democrat that can pull the Jewish money and media support that currently props up President Bush.

Clark is right about what props up Bush. But why should Bush's handlers gamble on other candidates? With Bush they have a sure and proven commodity.

Jews provide 20-25% of the Republicans' money. Most of the rest comes from idiots.

Mass democracy is where the biggest smiling liar wins.

☆☆☆☆ Four star general throws his yarmulke into the ring

Rightwing laughter of the month

In November of 2003, some right-wingers were trying to claim that the above man was involved in Waco. It is true that Clark's division did send some equipment including two main battle tanks. But the idea that the military would have let a political clown like General Clark be involved in a tactical operation like Waco is funny.

Clark is loathed and distrusted by the generals he served with. Nor did he gain any respect from the soldiers who served under him.

Besides, the Justice Department and the FBI wanted help at the "technical level." The technical level, which is the individual weapons level, is the level of sergeants and a few officers. The technical level deals with questions like, "What can a tank do and how can you use it to breach a wall?"

The Army was involved in Waco and illegally so. But political animals like Wesley Clark stayed in garrison, as they always do in combat situations. ✓

Clark: AIDS infected terrorists may destroy U.S.

President Bush will spend $15 billion on African HIV/AIDS. Peanuts says Wesley Clark; I'll spend $30 billion. That was the essence of Clark's first major foreign policy initiative. Clark says the AIDS battle is "not just a moral issue. It's a national security issue."

"We must make sure the scourge doesn't reverse gains in the developing world and turn developing states into terrorist breeding grounds. If we don't fight AIDS with medicine and preventive measures, one day we might have to fight AIDS-induced disorder with the force of arms. ... By destroying governments and hollowing out societies, this pandemic provides the perfect conditions for terrorist movements that thrive in areas of chaos and misery."

Just how millions of AIDS-infected Africans from AIDS-infested Africa would invade the U.S. or use weapons of mass destruction isn't clear from Clark's speech. But General Clark would never exaggerate.

You may remember that Clark said his forces destroyed 95 Serb tanks, 153 armored personnel carriers, and 389 artillery pieces. Then he raised his claim to 110 tanks, 210 APCs, and 449 artillery pieces. The final total was only 14 tanks, 18 APCs, and 20 artillery pieces. And much of that was just old broken-down junk that the Serbs didn't have time to tow into the trees.

Until his AIDS speech on 1 December 2003, Clark had campaigned mostly in packed Jewish Temples and crowded delicatessens. Palm Beach, Florida, Jews paid $2,000 each just to share a little Kosher food and shake the hand of this great general. ✓

If you think, Thunderbolt makes fun of our American mass democracy, you are 100% right.

Susan Berkovitz, daughter of Hyman

No one can hate and feud like the Berkovitzs of Minneapolis-St. Paul can. Often they don't speak to each other. To settle Hyman Berkowitz's modest estate of $170,000, they hired Shelley Joseph-Kordell, a cousin whose business it is to fix such problems for old people. Susan Rae Berkovitz was so estranged from the family that after Hyman's funeral, the others simply and deliberately drove off and abandoned her in the cold, alone at the cemetery.

Susan Berkovitz, 52, was probably the nuttiest of them all. She had spent her entire life taking care of her elderly parents. She had no life of her own and was a spiteful little woman. She was so forgetful that occasionally she wore her clothes inside out. Susan felt that cousin Shelley had cheated her out of her fair share of Hyman's estate.

Shelly was an extreme left-winger from Minnesota's radical DFL group. She was very well liked and considered a gracious Jewish hostess. She hired a lawyer, Richard Hendrickson, to enforce her will over Susan. The court battles went on for years with Susan losing most of the time. Just about everyone concerned had a restraining order against Susan, but she had a few against her enemies too. Susan was broke and living in cheap motels and shelters. They say Susan had even called Hendrickson a scumbag lawyer. [Aren't they all?]

On 29 September 2003, the three were scheduled to meet in one of Minneapolis' special harassment courts, where Susan was trying to get a restraining order against Shelly and lawyer Hendrickson. Susan's brother, Robert, one of Susan's enemies, said it was to be a "final accounting." The courtroom was on the 17th floor. A county security officer was protecting Shelly even though Susan was not considered violent. Just before the scheduled hearing, he waited outside the bathroom for Shelly.

However, they underestimated Susan. Around the corner from the bathroom, she pulled her S&W .38 and shot Hendrickson in the neck. He survived. The security guard ran around the corner to investigate the shot. Susan walked right past him into the bathroom and mowed down Shelly, who died two hours later.

Susan attempted to just walk out of the courthouse, but it's so huge that by the time she got to the exit, a deputy was waiting to arrest her.

Now, they all claim Susan was nuts, and she probably was. But none of her family would spend one minute or one red cent to get her committed.

And poor Shelly, such a good woman, and how she suffered all her life. Born into a powerful political family, Jimmy Carter made her Ambassador to the Netherlands, and even in that job she suffered. Separated from her family, she suffered. And as a reporter for the Minneapolis Tribune she suffered. And from her bleeding ulcers, how she suffered. And, such a good woman! Did you know that once she even went over to a client's house and fed their cat! And she didn't charge them anything for it. [Sarcasm intended.]

The Minnesota media became fixated on the gun. Susan Berkovitz said she bought it at a gun show. So they called in the ATF for a major investigation. Her five-shot revolver was so old that it had no serial number and was apparently manufactured between 1890 and 1910. After that, serial numbers were required. There was no background check, so she must have bought it through a loophole. [Police say she would have passed the background check because she had never been arrested or committed to a mental hospital.] ✓

Robert Durst, not guilty

A jury found New York, Jewish millionaire Robert Durst not guilty of murder in the grisly homicide of Morris Black in Galveston, Texas. Many thought the evidence showed him guilty. Certainly his behavior suggested guilt. After his arrest, he jumped bond and escaped.

He was only caught because he is extraordinarily cheap and a petty thief. While a fugitive, he stopped at a grocery store in Hanover Township, Pennsylvania. Allegedly he stole one Band-Aid, and a sandwich from the store's deli department. He had $520 in his pocket and $38,000 in his car.

He still faces charges for jumping bail and now is being held unless he produces $2 million for bail. ✓

Religious intolerance

In November 2003, Jews across the U.S. prepared for a verbal war with a tiny Jewish splinter group, Jews for Jesus. According to Jews, Jews for Jesus makes the outrageous claim that "one can be Jewish and believe in Christ at the same time."

It is well known that Jews do not recruit others to Judaism, nor do they tolerate Jews being recruited to Christianity. Judaism is the religion of ethnic Jews.

Rabbi Joel Levine says of the Jews in Jews for Jesus, "They're offensive and make Jewish people uncomfortable." If this is true, why are Jews mounting a huge, expensive, nationwide campaign against Jews for Jesus? The answer is that Jews, religious or otherwise, are extremely intolerant. ✓

Intolerance & Passion: Braveheart becomes chickenheart

Abe Foxman of the Anti-Defamation League is defaming Mel Gibson's Passion, and the Christian passion story. Foxman has headed the ADL since 1987.

Mel Gibson produced and directed a movie he calls Passion. It is the Biblical story of Jesus, and his movie is what Christians call a passion play. There are hundreds or thousands of passion plays produced in the U.S. each year.

So, who cares? Who gives one little damn about this minor movie? The Jews do. They are terrified that the sheep who go to the movies will realize that, according to the New Testament, the Jews forced the prosecution and execution of Jesus. Now every Christian from cardinal to cretin knows that this is the story.

Billy Graham says it is all right for the sheep to go see Passion.

This man looks confused and on the run. His ability to rouse patriotism with movies like Braveheart, has made him the number-one-priority censorship target.

The Jews think that Christians are so stupid that they'll suddenly abandon their Jew-loving and start murdering Jews. The Jews' hatred for Christians is so great that their inborn irrationality is showing through.

Leading the charge is none other than Abe Foxman of the ADL. Honest Abe says Passion portrays Jews as a mob forcing the torture and execution of Jesus and that it shows Jews as blood-thirsty, money hungry, and sadistic. The ADL also charges that the film is historically inaccurate. [As if historians even agree that Jesus existed.]

Back a couple of decades ago, the Jews produced a vile anti-Christian passion play whose name escapes me [and should]. It showed a tormentor of Jesus at a swimming pool saying, "Jesus Christ, if you're so cool, walk across my swimming pool." Apparently, that fits Honest Abe's standard of historical accuracy. Hollywood has produced hundreds of films that portray Christians in a negative and false light.

The Jews have poor Catholic altar boy Mel Gibson shaking in his boots. He's too terrified even to show Passion at the Vatican without further self-censorship, which he calls reediting. He apparently can't cope with the attacks of the Pharisees.

Their attacks on Gibson only demonstrate that Jews are the most intolerant race. They are as intolerant of Gibson as they were of Jesus 2,000 years ago. Gibson should have cast the parts of the tormentors of Jesus with real Jews. Who would be your choices? My choices would include Chuck Schumer, Alan Dershowitz, Barbara Feinstein, Jerrold Nadler, and, of course, Honest Abe Foxman. N

Passion, as a movie, is not important. But as symptom of a cancer in our homeland, the attack on Passion is deadly important. Don't ignore that lump in your armpit.

This is Mr. Alan Dershowitz. Can you think of anyone more intolerant or less hateful than Dershowitz? Abe Foxman would have you believe that Jews would never have tortured Jesus. Yet, that is precisely what Mr. Dershowitz proposed to do with Moslem prisoners that the U.S. holds at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

To the Jews, "Christians" and "Whites" are the same thing. Their eternal hate for Christians is really a manifestation of their hate for all Whites and everything that is White.

They claim to be just a religion or culture

ADL nailed for libel

In 1994 in Evergreen, Colorado, the Aronsons and the Quigleys were having a neighborhood dispute. The Anti-Defamation League accused the Quigleys of being anti-Semitic. The Quigleys countered with two lawsuits. The first one proved that the Aronsons had resorted to an illegal wiretap. The second one proved that the ADL had libeled the Quigleys. At this point, the ADL is still too cheap to pay the Quigley's the $9.75 million dollar judgment, which was upheld in October of 2003.

The ADL has an annual budget of $60 million and a staff of 350. About half of the money comes from U.S. corporations and the rest from wealthy Jews. All of it is tax deductible, of course. ✎

ADL accuses Paschall of patriotism

In October 2003, the Anti-Defamation League accused Colorado's Jefferson County Treasurer of handing out literature from the Patriotic movement. Treasurer Mark Paschall was handing out a booklet that quoted John Jay, the first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and others on jury nullification.

Mark Paschall also angered the Jews in 2000. As a state legislator, he was the sponsor for a bill essentially outlawing same-sex marriage. The law simply defined a marriage as a union between one man and one woman.

Thunderbolt is not endorsing Mark Paschall. He is a politician, a smiling liar and a crook, like all politicians. ✎

You be the judge

Shortly after the 9-11 World Trade Center attack, Victor Amosov, a Jewish immigrant from Russia, was arrested in Arapahoe County, Colorado. He had been threatening Moslems in the parking lot of the Islamic worship center. He claimed to have an AK-47. Later he was charged only with disorderly conduct. Had this been a White threatening Moslems or Jews in exactly the same way, what do you think would have happened? ✎

Every time Ashcroft uncovers his mouth, he vomits his hate for us.

On Friday 7 November 2003, Attorney General John Ashcroft essentially declared verbal anti-Semitism to be a crime. "This administration believes that acts of anti-Semitism must be confronted, condemned and denounced. As history shows, verbal attacks on the Jewish people are portents of more savage criminality to come." In other words, verbal attacks are criminal, but other acts are more criminal.

Ashcroft gave his speech before 450 Jews at the Anti-Defamation League's national meeting, which was celebrating their 90th anniversary. Amazingly, during the speech, Ashcroft vowed to fight "anti-Semitism and terrorism" as if the two were of equal importance. Abe Foxman, ADL honcho added, "We, the Jewish people, feel more vulnerable today than we ever have since World War II, and the world is not a welcome place."

As great as are the crimes of the Jews, they pale next to the crimes of Whites like John Ashcroft. We expect the Jews to behave like rattlesnakes, but we expect more of a White men born into privilege and power.

There is little doubt that verbal anti-Semitism will eventually be twisted into a crime. In fact, the U.S. is almost the only White country left that has free speech concerning the Jews. Your editor fully expects that he will be one of those locked up. What is happening to our people is far more serious than what can happen to us as individuals. ✎

Ecstasy DNA mutations

In December 2003, scientists in Italy said they have linked the drug Ecstasy to genetic mutations as well as cancer. Dr. Giorgio Bronzetti said Ecstasy and cocaine "have proved to be more dangerous than we had imagined." These drugs attack DNA and will cause mutations in future generations.

Ecstasy and methamphetamines are now the two biggest drug threats and are overshadowing cocaine and heroin.

The international Ecstasy market is controlled by Jews, whose chief bases of operations are in the Netherlands and Israel. In 2003, they began constructing secret factories in Germany to supplement the ones in the Netherlands.

Even in New Zealand, Israeli drug agents have been arrested carrying large shipments of Ecstasy.

In South Africa, the Israeli mafia is the number one criminal gang. Ecstasy dealing is their specialty. In recent months, they have also been especially active in cocaine trafficking, diamond smuggling, and murder. South Africa's Russian mafia is also an almost exclusively Jewish operation but is not considered a bigger threat than the Nigerian mafia or Pakistani mafia.

Most Whites will realize the health hazards of Ecstasy and stop using it, like they stopped using other illegal drugs. However, the genetic damage to our people will remain. Placing the blame for this heinous crime is easy. ✎

Yom Kippur ticket scalping

There are 50,000 or more Jews in the West Boynton, Florida, area. To attend Yom Kippur services, they must purchase a ticket from a local synagogue. However, the large influx of Jews into the area has caused a shortage of tickets, which in October 2003 were quickly sold out. An active secondary market has developed, although there have been no reports of ticket scalping in front of the synagogue doors. No wonder Jews are so interested in money. They can't even get into church without paying. ✎

Video rapist strikes campus

In October 2003, Carl Romeo Allen, 41, was arrested in Memphis for being a peeping tom. He bonded out.

On Sunday morning, 2 November, someone walked into a male student's room at a Christian Brothers University fraternity house with a video camera with bright lights on. He left after being confronted by the boy who had been sleeping there. Minutes later, the boy saw the man again leaving a fraternity house. The student wrote down the license plate number. The car was registered to Carl Romeo Allen.

A short time later, someone was going through a dormitory and walking into rooms with a video camera with bright lights on. He was taping co-eds while they slept. Police say he was Carl Allen. He was undressing the co-eds. If they woke up he would tell them he was authorized to be there, etc.

He walked into the room of one girl and when he pulled her blankets back she woke up. He left. So, she went to check on the other girls. She caught him in another room where he had disrobed a sleeping girl. She found a male student and they chased the intruder, to his car. He abandoned the car without ever starting it. Allen was soon arrested for rape. ✎

NC's 7th grade math test

Those who passed North Carolina's 2003 seventh grade math test by race were Whites, 95%, Blacks, 67%, and Hispanics, 57%. Only two years prior, Hispanics scored 81%. Math tests reflect innate intelligence (IQ). ✎

Flunk those dummies

Until the President Bush's recent "No Child Left Behind Act," progress of Black students in schools was determined mostly by the "social promotion" system. If a Black was not disruptive and occasionally faked some interest in his schoolwork, he was automatically advanced even if he flunked the tests and didn't turn in any homework.

This system helped keep Blacks, who were incapable of passing, off the streets during the day. It was an expensive form of babysitting but probably necessary.

Under the Bush plan, stupid and/or lazy students will in fact be "left behind." If schools follow the letter of the law, dummies will be flunked and then flunked again. Pretty soon, you will have 18-year-old disruptive idiots taking eighth-grade classes along with your 13- and 14-year-olds. ✎

Pell grants for perverts

The Florida Civil Commitment Center in Arcadia houses 426 of the worst sexual perverts and violent rapists in Florida. Most of the inmates have multiple convictions for violent sex crimes. They are too unsafe ever to allow out. Their commitment is civil and not criminal, like committing an insane person.

Inmates take university courses over the TV and then get Federal Pell Grants for doing it. Pell Grants were intended for poor college students. Last year, 54 of these predator perverts got $200,000 in Pell Grants. One rapist, who has only been out of incarceration for two of the last 31 years, has gotten $15,000 so far.

State Senator J. Alex Villalobos takes a typical Republican attitude: "The Pell Grants should be stopped and the money used for treatment for these unfortunate men. That way they can be released and live useful lives."

No, Senator, these men need to stay in a forced-labor, 60-hour-per-week prison as long as they can earn their keep. Then they should be put to sleep like any mad dog. ✎

Sidney McPhee sexual harasser

In 2001, the Tennessee Board of Regents hired Sidney McPhee to be president of Middle Tennessee State University (30 miles southeast of Nashville). McPhee is an immigrant from the Bahamas. On 6 October 2003 a campus woman filed a sexual harassment complaint against McPhee. She said that McPhee had touched her inappropriately. Somehow the media found out, and on 14 October, the woman withdrew charges to avoid the public eye.

When the media published the story, McPhee made a vague defense saying things like he never violated his wedding vows and the allegations have nothing to do with "my official duties, misappropriation of taxpayer resources or other malfeasance." He checked himself into a hospital.

On 5 December, the Board of Regents found that McPhee had done inappropriate things to a female colleague and that the actions were enough to create a "hostile work environment." McPhee was suspended for 20 days without pay and will have to attend reeducation training. His salary is $180,000 per year.

Prevention of sexual harassment is the number-one rule on university campuses. Apparently, it is only a minor violation for Sidney McPhee. ✎

Teachers are among our best people; educators are among our worst.

Remedial course gap shocks experts

Al Kauffman

The results are in for Louisiana college freshmen for 2002. On average, twice as many Blacks must take remedial courses as Whites. Hispanics are somewhere in the middle. Actual percentages of students requiring remedial courses are: Blacks, 61%, Hispanics, 41%, Asians, 29%, and Whites, 28%.

Educators claim that they just can't figure it out. They must know that it has always been that way, and that it is that way everywhere in the U.S. It's the racial order of education because it is the racial order of intelligence. It is true in Omaha, Boston, Birmingham, Oregon, Sacramento, or Stump Hollow, Mississippi.

Politicians and educators spend billions for tutoring, smaller class sizes, etc., and it does no good. They say there is hope because the gap is smaller among grade school children. Again, the gap has always been smaller in grade school than middle school, and the gap gets wider in high school and even wider in college. Blacks mature physically and mentally faster than Whites. And the tutoring and special attention helps them in grade school. But even in grade school, they are behind, and they lose ground thereafter.

And the math gap is the biggest gap in Louisiana. That is also true everywhere and at every time.

What is to blame? Educators try to blame poverty. But when you show them that poor Black kids have a learning gap placing them below poor White kids, they are forced back into the "It takes more than a couple of years to undo hundreds of years of imbalance" cliché, which is a direct quote from Mike Wang, an advisor to the Louisiana Governor. We've been trying to undo the gap at least since 1960. We have tried more than "a couple of years."

Jewish Harvard lawyer, Al Kauffman, said, "When people get to college and there are these gaps, a lot of it is due to this history of unequal opportunities that minorities suffered all through school." That is pure hokum. It takes a lot of Jewish chutzpah to tell a whopper like that. ✎

Dunwoody strip search

At Dunwoody High School in suburban Atlanta, a school police officer says he saw two girls smoking marijuana. The two girls were taken to assistant principal Linda Bobo's office. Bobo ordered a partial strip search; there is no information to indicate that the male officer was present. Nothing was found. A marijuana cigarette was later found near where the girls had been standing.

The girls' parents complained, and the administrator ordered Bobo to be put on probation for three years and the police officer has been transferred. School system administrator Bob Moseley said the only justification for a strip search "would be if there was an immediate threat to life."

The future of our schools is criminal students, powerless and incompetent administrators, minority police officers, and endless red tape and lawsuits. ✎

School system mergers

School system mergers continue. Parents in Orange County, NC, (largest city, Chapel Hill) are fighting County Commissioners to stop them from steamrolling a consolidation. The excuse, as usual, is "funding equality" required by the Federal courts. The net effect of the mergers is to force mostly White schools to merge with mostly Black schools. The White schools provide better schooling even when they have less funding.

Lieberman's college plan

Senator Joe Lieberman is sick and tired of the lack of Blacks graduating from college. He proposes more Pell Grants and increasing them from $4,050 per year to $7,760 per year. Under his plan, colleges will be rewarded for recruiting more minorities and rewarded if they graduate more [apparently, regardless of whether they learn anything or not]. Lieberman also promised to put another $6 billion into Bush's "No Child Left Behind" program.

Lieberman announced his grand plan at the all-Black Benedict College, in South Carolina. Benedict College President David Swinton wants all the money Lieberman offers but doesn't want any "report card" comparing Benedict to other colleges.

Lieberman's says 90% of all high school graduates should go to college and vocational schools. And, of those, 90% had better graduate or the school will be punished. [Can you imagine 90% of Blacks going to college or vocational School, and 90% of them graduating?] Lieberman said, "In my opinion, this is really a pass-fail test for America and for the promise of equal opportunity." ✎

Big schools and big school systems mean more bureaucracy, inefficiency, crime, and political correctness.

In Arkansas, Republican Governor Mike Huckabee is trying to force school consolidations using the "funding equity" excuse. [I taught at an Arkansas University and can testify that students from the small districts do as well or better than those from the big hellhole schools. —Editor] ✎

Bed bug plague: Multiply fast, hard to kill

Public health and pest control experts across America are blaming the exploding bed bug plague on foreigners. Specifically mentioned are Third World travelers, immigrants, students, and even United Nations diplomats. One female bug brought home can lay 250-500 eggs, which hatch within days. Before they are discovered, the home is usually totally infested.

Bed bugs are carried anywhere they can hide: suitcases, clothing, used furniture, and even purses. Many hotels, airliners, homeless shelters, apartments, and even restaurants and doctors' offices are becoming infested. Transportation, hotel, and welfare workers carry them home, and then the bed bugs spread to other homes.

The worst outbreaks so far are in New York, Florida, and California. Many of New York City's finest and most expensive hotels are infested, especially near the United Nations headquarters. In that city, there is a shortage of chemicals, and the exterminators claim to be overwhelmed.

And it isn't just the best hotels and flea traps. Mid-level hotels and motels are becoming a problem. Jewish appeals Judge Richard Posner upheld a $373,000 judgment for a couple who went through two nights of "living hell" at Chicago Motel 6. Immigrants run many of our motels and hotels.

At least three university campuses have been hit hard. In December 2003, officials at the University of Oklahoma in Norman were forced to evacuate four dormitories. The carpets were ripped up. After massive chemical treatments of whole buildings, all the furniture was replaced.

Bed bugs are exceptionally hard to kill. GI's and their baggage returning after World War II were successfully treated with DDT. However, DDT is now outlawed and none of the current chemicals are very effective in killing bed bugs. Home owners in Florida have been forced to throw away most of their possessions and even rip out moldings.

Pesticide contractors build a tent over the home and keep it filled with chemicals until the bed bugs are dead. Entomologists say that even after three or four days of gassing some bugs are still alive. This is no ordinary plague. The bed bug is considered one of nature's most indestructible creatures.

Officials warn that the plague is here to stay and predict it will spread. Welcome to the Third World.✍

Actual size

The bed bug is bloodsucking insect.

Bed bugs are flat, round, and about one-quarter inch long. They are often brownish in color but their bodies are translucent. They double their weight when they suck human blood and then turn a bright red.

Bed bugs usually only attack humans and are spread only by infested people and their belongings.

The victim will not feel a bed bug when it bites; the bites are painless. But it leaves a bit of poison in each bite which sometimes becomes irritating and the victim develops bumps, welts, or a rash. The bed bug bites, sucks some blood, moves a little, and then bites again. Thus, it leaves a series of tiny wounds in a straight line. The wounds may continue to bleed a little after the bug moves on and thus the victims or his bed sheets may have a line of tiny blood stains.

Few people know how to recognize bed bug bites. Some reported going to several dermatologists, who also did not recognize it. To a civilized and clean people this is an entirely new phenomenon.

Bed bugs do not normally spread diseases, although in some cases hepatitis B has been spread by them.✍

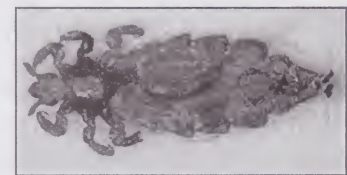

Head lice epidemic

This pretty girl caught head lice from one of her classmates. It's a humiliating experience to have someone pick nits out of your hair.

Experts blame the increase in head lice cases in the U.S. on "lower socioeconomic" families. They can not or will not clean the lice out of their children's hair and their homes. In Tucson, one child came to school with head lice 22 times in one year.

Head lice are passed with pillows, blankets, stuffed toys, combs, brushes, hats, or direct contact with heads. Generally, the only result of head lice is itching. People who don't care or are too lazy to get rid of them live with them indefinitely.✍

The pediculus humanus capitis is a bloodsucking insect, which lives in human hair.

One bed bug horror story

Dr. Phil Koehler, an entomologist with the University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Services, relates one extreme bed bug example. Hotel employees discovered that a motel room that had been occupied for a month by foreigners was extremely smelly. So they opened up windows to air out that room. Koehler reported that outside humidity caused the walls to tighten up. He said, "When the humidity from outside air got into the room, the molding went flush with the wall, squashed the bed bugs, and blood ran down the walls in that motel room from the guests that had been sucked dry."✍

Worst hepatitis A outbreak in U.S. history occurs in Pittsburgh suburb

The attacks

Four hepatitis A outbreaks occurred in September, October, and November 2003 in the U.S. They were all traced to the same strain of Hepatitis A and all traced to green onions/scallions coming from Mexico. The Mexican government denies the diseased onions came from their country.

The worst outbreak was at a Chi-Chi's restaurant near Pittsburgh, 25 miles northwest of the city. This attack happened in October and early November 2003. Of those eating at Chi Chi's, 615 people contracted the disease, and three died. Others were seriously debilitated. One man, Richard Miller, had to have a liver transplant. His medical bills so far are $500,000.

O'Charley's restaurants near Knoxville, Tennessee, are blamed for 81 cases. One man died. Attacks in Georgia and North Carolina infected 259 people and 16 people respectively.

O'Charley's has already been sued. Their produce suppliers will soon be sued. Chi-Chi's is hiding behind its bankruptcy protection obtained in early October.

The Pittsburgh attack alone is the largest outbreak of hepatitis A in U.S. history.

Why Mexico is a problem

The hepatitis A virus is spread by human contact with diseased feces. Thus, hepatitis A is unlike hepatitis B & C, which are spread by blood (usually on needles). Someone puts the infected object in their mouth. People who have hepatitis A are the carriers, and it is their feces going to someone else that spreads the disease. Children, of course, aren't careful about washing their hands, and their contact with each other is a common mode of transmission. But in a sanitary area, that's about as far as it gets, because most adults and many children do wash their hands. There may be thousands of mini-epidemics in the U.S. each year, each infecting only a few children. These "mini-epidemics" quickly die out.

These Indians in Mexico are harvesting green onions. Technically, no one under 14 is allowed to work in the fields. The women must depend on older children to babysit the younger ones while the mother bundles onions. Families of six to ten children are common.

Hepatitis A is a virus that attacks the human liver and causes fevers, nausea, diarrhea, jaundice, fatigue, abdominal pain and loss of appetite. It is not noticed by the body for two weeks or more. Then the body goes to war with the cells in the infected liver. The dead cells and toxins end up in the intestines, and the victim suddenly realizes that he is sick, very sick. Often it takes months to recover and hepatitis is occasionally fatal. Children do much better than adults. Thus, outbreaks from restaurants where most of the victims are adults are especially dangerous.

Another common route is through food. An infected worker in the food chain can infect many others. Small epidemics have been traced to restaurant workers who were carriers. In a few cases, they brought the disease to work with them from their children.

Hepatitis A can be spread from distribution centers, markets, and farms. For example, if an infected neighbor or farm worker deposits feces, rain can wash it into a pond. If water from that pond is used in growing or washing produce, the produce can become infected.

Children are relatively resilient to Hepatitis A. And once they have fought off the disease, these children remain virtually immune to hepatitis A for the rest of their lives.

That's where Mexico comes in. Most children in Mexico have had hepatitis. It's so common that it's hardly reported. They grow up to be immune from further attack. They can work in the produce fields and washing/packing plants and never catch something that is all around them. Sanitation in Mexico is terrible.

Mexican officials claim that produce from Mexico undergoes nine times as many inspections as does produce grown in the U.S. Yet, American produce rarely carries diseases. That's because there is no disease to be carried.

Food inspectors cannot find hepatitis A virus. They can only find things like dirt that might be infected. Thus, if the produce looks clean, it passes inspection. Green onions, for example, come in bundles held together by a rubber band. No inspector can assure that none of the bundles have dirt inside.

Labor costs

About 80% of green onions/scallions consumed in the U.S. are grown in Mexico. We can grow onions that are as good or even better. The hitch is the labor cost to harvest the onions. In Mexico, total labor cost to pick, wash, and prepare one bunch of green onions (six to nine onions) is about 4¢. Mexican produce workers make about $1 per hour, so you can calculate the cost at other rates. For example, at $8 per hour the labor costs per bunch would rise to 32¢. At $12 it would be 48¢. ✎

Mexican trucks pour across border, 3,000 per day at a single entry point. Inspectors can't check them all. Many drivers become experts at fooling and bribing the inspectors.

Day of the Rope nomination

Day of the Rope metaphor

Dr. William L. Pierce predicted that White Americans would someday get fed up with White race traitors. Whites will likely rise up and hang the traitors from the nearest lamppost, he predicted in his famous novel, The Turner Diaries.

Thunderbolt believes that such an event may well occur in the not-too-distant future. From time to time, we will feature those whom Whites might rise against.

We hope that such an event need never occur. Hopefully the "lynching" will be just a political metaphor and not a physical reality. However, we see no indication that our enemies will come to their senses.

George Ryan was a professional politician from 1973 through 2001, when accusations of corruption forced him to drop his plans for reelection to the governorship. As Illinois secretary of state, his department was so full of corruption that 59 people have already been convicted.

One family lost all six of their small children, because one of Ryan's cronies took a bribe to issue a commercial driver's license to Ricardo Guzman, who couldn't even speak English (see back cover).

In December 2003, Ryan was indicted by the Federal government on 22 counts of various corruption charges.

When he was washed up as a lame duck governor, this "conservative" Republican commuted the sentences of 167 death row inmates. These vicious killers represent the worst 3% of convicted killers in Illinois. For this "humane" act, Ryan was nominated for the Nobel peace prize.

His corruption, crimes, and inhumanity earn him this month's Day of the Rope nomination. ⚡

The first four south Louisiana murders. Baton Rouge police suspected a serial killer after the brutal rape-murders of Gina Green (23 Sep 2001), GERALYN DeSoto (14 January 2002), and Charlotte Pace (31 May 2002). After Pam Kinamore's body was found on 16 July 2002, public pressure forced area law enforcement agencies to form a task force. These four pre-task force victims are pictured on the back cover.

The task force. The victims were attractive, well-dressed White women. The rapist was an extremely brutal killer who beat, strangled, stabbed, and slit throats. Beyond that, the task force knew little.

The FBI was called in, and the FBI's psychological profiler said the killer was a White man. Peripheral witnesses had seen a meek-looking White, so a composite sketch was made and released. This sketch appeared in hundreds of newspaper editions and television news programs. Police began rounding up White men who furnished DNA "cheek samples," either voluntarily or by court order.

Governor George Ryan's incompetent truck driver

Scott and Janet Willis' faces will forever be disfigured and scarred. But the scars on their hearts and souls are much worse.

On 8 November 1994, Reverend Scott Willis arrived at the polls early and voted for George Ryan for Illinois secretary of state. He and his wife Janet had a busy day planned. They were going to take the six youngest of their nine children to visit Dan Willis' home in Milwaukee for Dan's birthday party. Dan is one of their adult children, and they were going to celebrate his birthday along with Hank's sixth birthday. Benjamin, 12, oldest of the children with them, was behind the passenger's seat so he could watch the 6-week-old baby, Peter, who was behind Scott, the driver.

About 10:30 a.m., they were on I-94 in Milwaukee not far from Dan's home. The car in front of them swerved to miss a six-inch by 30-inch piece of metal debris weighing 30 pounds. Scott had only a split second to decide whether to hit the debris

An Illinois court awarded the Willis's, $100,000,000 for the loss of these six children.

Scott Willis said of the loss of his children, "The depth of the pain is indescribable."

In response to the media, Reverend Willis shows the bandages covering the horrible burns on his hands.

with a front tire or go directly over it. Fearing it would flip his minivan, he went directly over it. It jumped up and pierced the gasoline tank, which exploded. Instantly, the van became an oven of burning gasoline. Scott yelled, "Get out, get out." Scott, Janet, and Dan had to reach into the flames just to unbuckle their seat belts, as they dived and fell out of the still-moving minivan.

Benjamin had been totally engulfed in the midst of the fire. Virtually, all of his clothes were burned off. A stranger put out the fire on Janet's back and tried to cover the horribly burned Benjamin. The other five children never got out, and their deaths must have been an unimaginable hell. Benjamin's death was worse; he died in intensive care about 14 hours later.

The debris, a mud flap/taillight assembly, had fallen off the trailer, which Ricardo Guzman was pulling. For miles, other truck drivers and motorists tried to get Mendoza's attention by waving their arms and pointing at the dragging assembly. Truckers tried calling him on the CB, but Guzman can't speak any English. Guzman just kept his 18-wheeler going until the 30 pound piece of metal fell off. Then he drove on.

Ricardo Guzman had gotten his Illinois Commercial Driver's License illegally. Gonzalo Mendoza had bribed a corrupt crony of Secretary of State George Ryan to get Mendoza his license. ✎

Gonzalo Mendoza Special

Ricardo Guzman, an illegal truck driver, couldn't speak English. He was the truck driver involved in the killing of the five Willis children.

Gonzalo Mendoza got commercial trucker's licenses for 80 unqualified non-English-speaking drivers, including Guzman, by bribing crooked officials. He pleaded guilty in February 2000.

Mendoza was safety director for Pacella Trucking. He was bribing officials at the McCook licensing facility so often that the procedure became known as a "Gonzalo Mendoza Special."

Jim Culliton was a professional driver with 20 years of law-abiding experience on the big rigs. In November of 1999, he was standing beside his UPS rig getting ready to drop off his trailer at the Union-Pacific rail yard. Suddenly his trailer was rear-ended by another 18-wheeler. Jim Culliton was crushed to death between his tractor and trailer. The other driver, who was working for Pacella Trucking, just drove away. He claimed he didn't even know he had hit anything.

Lawyers for Culliton's widow believe that the driver is another of Pacella's "Gonzalo Mendoza Specials." The log of a driver's license facility employee has the words "Gonzalo Mendoza Special" recorded on the day the driver was licensed. ✎

Louisiana serial killer task force

Louisiana authorities and the FBI spent seven months looking for the White man in the mock wanted poster on page 34. In March 2003, they finally stated the serial killer could be "of any race." They ignored two independent DNA experts who told them the killer was Black. Above is Derrick Todd Lee. He occasionally worked pouring concrete and is said to be charming. Black women find him very handsome. He has a long arrest record mostly for minor crimes including stalking, peeping tom, flight, attempted murder, and several counts each of simple battery, aggravated battery, and burglary. He was able to charm and BS his way out of most of the charges. Lee readily quotes the Bible and was considered by his neighbors to be a law-abiding, good man.

The task force asked California DNA expert Charles Brenner for help. In mid-January and again in early March, Brenner told them that the DNA showed that the suspect was most likely a Black man. The task force didn't want to hear that. Brenner says, "I didn't get the impression that they were fascinated by it." He told them bluntly, "Caucasians would be the last people I'd look at."

In mid-March, Tony Frudakis, a Florida DNA expert, told the task force DNA samples showed the man to be 85% Black and 15% American Indian. The task force acted surprised. Frudakis persisted and told them, "In over 3,000 tests, we've yet to get one wrong. So, your guy is an African-American." At this point, the task force had tested about 1,000 White men. Laboratory costs for this alone were $1 million.

Instead of admitting that the suspect was Black, the task force began saying the killer "could be of any race."

The slaughter continues. On 24 November 2002 the body of Trineisha Colomb, the only non-White killed, was found. On 13 March, 2003, the body of Carrie Lynn Yoder was found.

Derrick Todd Lee. Police were investigating Derrick Todd Lee in connection with the murder and disappearance of two women not in the above-mentioned six. They obtained a court ordered DNA sample from him on 5 May. The same day, Lee disappeared. Because they were now considering Blacks as well as Whites, Lee's DNA was cross-checked with DNA from the six killings. Police say the first two samples checked were an exact match for Lee. A warrant was issued for him on 26 May. The next day, Lee was arrested in Atlanta, Georgia. All six have now been linked to him by DNA, but he is only formally charged in two murders. He pleaded not guilty. He is a suspect in several other murders, rapes, and disappearances.

Collette Dwyer evaded accused killer Derrick Todd Lee for many months. In November 2003, she blew the whistle on the serial killer task force for repeatedly ignoring her identification of Lee as a prime suspect. She says Lee relentlessly stalked her, forcing her to go into hiding. However her job as a firefighter in St. Francisville made her easy to locate and track to her new hideout.

Collette Dwyer goes public. On 11 November 2003, Collette Dwyer went public with her allegations that she repeatedly told police that their prime suspect should be Derrick Todd Lee. She is a firefighter in St. Francisville. She says Lee had been stalking her since 1999. "Anywhere I went, he was there," she said.

Dwyer called five police agencies from her local police, to the state police, to the attorney general's office. She told them Lee's name. They switched her from person to person and had her call the task force. The task force ignored her reports. Dwyer said, "Every time one of these women was killed, I knew it was him. ... I called people and no one listened. I called a lot of people." Later in the press conference she said, "They didn't want to listen to anybody's tips. They were looking for a White guy."

Why? Why did it take so long for the police to get on the right track? Was it bad police work? Was it Political Correctness? Whatever the problem is, we know that the justice system—from the U.S. Supreme Court down to the local police chief and district attorney—is terminally corrupt. It cannot improve and will get much worse as long as we live in a multiracial country. N
